SEEING THE BIG PICTURE

I BELIEVE THE COVER TREATMENT OF last week's issue [July 24] concerning the special photo report on "Pictures that never saw the light of day" was a complete blunder. One of our photographs was used on the cover. The problem was there was no mention of the photograph in your story, or why it was not published.

All your readers learned was that the "Virginian-Pilot editors couldn't see their way clear to running Todd Spencer's award-winning photo of a rainbow over a local ball field." This was a rather inflammatory statement, considering no one ever called the editors involved in the decision to see why the photo wasn't used.

Now for the facts. I was the photo editor working the night the picture was taken. Todd Spencer, who was a free-lancer at the time, brought the photograph back from a regular sports assignment. As I recall, we had the photograph in hand around 10 p.m. I immediately loved the photograph and pitched it for the local news front.

The news editor, designer, and I discussed it for some time and the news editor decided that it wasn't worth remaking the page for a stand-alone photo, even though it was recognized as an extraordinary image. The news editor came up with the idea of using the photograph as part of a weather feature page for later use. Unfortunately, this usage never materialized.

It was quite disappointing to the editors at The Virginian-Pilot to be so unfairly represented by a magazine that is supposed to represent the ideals of our industry. And, to make matters worse, the photograph was badly cropped on the cover.

Judge makes it official: 'Chron' & 'Ex' done deals

Combative Clint Reilly, of course, could choose to appeal decision

BY JOEL DAVIS
SACRAMENTO, CALIF.

SEEMINGLY WHILE HOLDING HIS NOSE, A FEDERAL judge ruled Thursday he will not block the sale of the San Francisco Chronicle to the Hearst Corp. and that his court has no legal footing to stop the sale of the San Francisco Examiner to the Fang family.

In permitting the $660-million Chronicle sale, U.S. District Judge Vaughn Walker blasted the Department of Justice (DOJ) for interfering in the Chronicle deal for political reasons, expressed doubts about the Fangs' ability to run a paper that he hinted should be allowed to die, and criticized several top Hearst executives for being untruthful. In his 46-page ruling, Walker also said Clint Reilly, the millionaire businessman and would-be mayor who brought the suit to prevent the deal between the de Young family's Chronicle Publishing Co. and Hearst, does not have the legal standing to challenge the Examiner sale.

The judge repeatedly called the Examiner a failing paper that would be "a sure loser" outside its joint operating agreement (JOA) with the Chronicle, and added that the "problematic" JOA "was not worth saving." The Fang purchase, heavily subsidized by Hearst, does not include participation in the JOA.

But the judge saved most of his vitriol for the DOJ, finding that the "cronyism that fueled the Fang transaction at the local level also exerted influence over the DOJ investigation." He deemed the DOJ sanction of the Fang deal faulty, calling it "political favoritism masquerading as law enforcement."

While finding that Hearst is under no legal obligation to sell to the Fangs, Walker, nevertheless, said it was not in his power to block a deal he characterized as economically far-fetched. "The court is

With his decision, Judge Vaughn Walker has finished all his San Francisco paper work.

KR EARNINGS JUMP 22.9%

Knight Ridder, the No. 2 U.S. newspaper publisher in terms of circulation, said second-quarter earnings per share (EPS) rose 22.9% to $1.02, thanks to cost controls and strong ad revenue growth, particularly at its California papers. A First Call/Thomson Financial estimate called for 95 cents EPS.

The company said it forecasts double-digit earnings growth for all of 2000, but cautioned that classified and general advertising will face tough comparisons in the second half.

Separately, the Washington Post Co. earnings fell 39% as the company ramped up its online spending. The decline was partly offset by higher operating income at The Washington Post and its magazine division.

And Dallas Morning News parent Belo reported EPS rose 3.8% to 27 cents, with strong revenue growth at its three biggest papers.

DEATH WATCH OK'D IN CALIF.

U.S. District Judge Vaughn Walker has ruled that the California media and public can witness the entire lethal injection execution process of condemned inmates.

The judge's injunction requires California's Department of Corrections to allow witnesses to watch from the time the injection apparatus is attached to the inmate until a physician pronounces death.

Prison officials had exaggerated security concerns when they blocked witnesses from seeing the execution preparations, the judge ruled. Media-rights groups had complained the restricted viewing was tantamount to seeing a "virtual corpse."

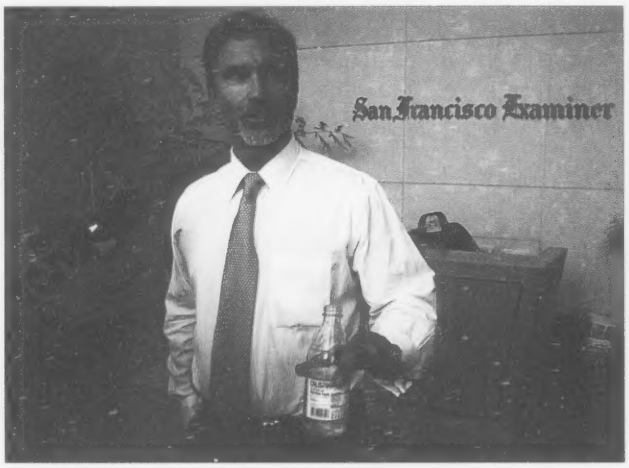
presently unable to do more than identify the malodorous aspects of the Fang transaction."

Saying he "hasn't digested the opinion yet," Fang declined comment. Fang attorney David M. Balabanian claimed victory, however. "The Fangs will be given an opportunity to make good on a promise," he told reporters.

Chronicle Publisher John Sias said he is "thrilled" with the outcome and said it is the Chronicle's intent to finalize the sale to Hearst "very expeditiously."



Examiner Executive Editor Phil Bronstein meets the press after the big ruling.

While Hearst officials will no doubt be pleased with the ruling, they may be smarting a bit from the judge's characterization of Hearst executives George B. Irish and Frank A. Bennack Jr. Walker said both men were aware of now-suspended Examiner Publisher Tim White's "horse trade" overtures to San Francisco Mayor Willie Brown in exchange for favorable editorial coverage, despite Hearst denials to the contrary. "These denials are not credible, and the court does not believe them," Walker wrote.

The judge does believe, however, that newspaper competition is alive and well in San Francisco. Ironically, he cited the rival San Jose Mercury News' high-profile expansion into San Francisco just last week as a key element of that competition. (For related story, see p. 9.) "The San Jose Mercury News poses a serious challenge to the market share of the San Francisco-based metropolitan dailies," Walker asserted. "The Mercury News is a comprehensive, widely circulated newspaper of high quality." ▣

Chicago-area papers in play

Copley Press Inc.'s suburban cluster given the eye by Shaw Newspapers

BY MARK FITZGERALD

CHICAGO

FOR SALE: ONE ready-made cluster of four dailies and 15 community papers in the Chicago suburbs. Inquire at Copley Press Inc., San Diego.

Copley has hired Veronis, Suhler & Associates LLC, the New York merchant bank, to "explore strategic alternatives" for its Fox Valley Press subsidiary. On the market are four dailies that form an arc around Chicago from the north to the southwest: The News Sun in Waukegan; The Courier News in Elgin; The Beacon News in Aurora; and The Herald-News in Joliet. Also included are the Sun newspapers led by the thrice-weekly Naperville Sun. The papers have a combined daily circulation of about 107,000.

A natural buyer would be Dixon, Ill.-based Shaw Newspapers, which publishes three dailies along the same arc: The Northwest Herald in Crystal Lake; the Kane County Chronicle in Geneva; and the Morris Daily Herald. Shaw and Fox Valley face competition in the suburbs from Paddock Publication's Daily Herald in Arlington; the Chicago Tribune; and, to a lesser extent, the Chicago Sun-Times.

> SHAW NEWSPAPERS

"Since Copley announced they were going to be selling their companies, we've told them we would have an interest in joining forces, through an acquisition, with what is a very good company. Other than that, I can't comment," said Shaw President and CEO Thomas D. Shaw.

Fox Valley papers have a mixed record, with the Sun papers expanding on pace with their fast-growing communities, but with the dailies suffering circulation declines. Estimates of the cluster's value, always uncertain in this record-high market, range upward from $150 million. ▣

'Mercury' rising in S.F. market

Newspaper war burns hotter with launch of new offensive

BY JOEL DAVIS
SACRAMENTO, CALIF.

THE SAN JOSE MERCURY NEWS HAS found its way into San Francisco, and it will compete for readers with what's shaping up as a Hearst Corp.-owned Chronicle and a Fang-owned Examiner. Flush with Silicon Valley prosperity and bravado, the Mercury News has elbowed its way into San Francisco with a splashy new city edition, raising the stakes in the city's newspaper war. The fight for readers figures to intensify dramatically now that a federal judge has OK'd the sales of the competition.

"[San Francisco] is a market where traffic is bad, and we can now guarantee a 5:30 a.m. delivery."
— JAY T. HARRIS
SAN JOSE MERCURY NEWS

Nine editorial staffers will be added to the Mercury News' existing one-man bureau in the heart of the city. While all city news will be covered, there will be a strong emphasis on business, technology, and entertainment news, said Publisher Jay T. Harris. He noted that the San Francisco edition will be printed at the paper's existing plants and that it will not require much in the way of new workers beyond editorial hires.

The Mercury News appears committed to the long haul or, in Harris' words, "decades." The paper — available at newsstands for 25 cents and via home delivery, which Harris says will be the growth area — is now being sold in the city on 196 additional news racks and 70 new store locations. In addition to a PR/advertising blitz that includes everything from billboards to hawkers dressed in high-tech "Intelesque" computer suits handing out free copies, the Mercury News is boasting of guaranteed home delivery by 5:30 a.m., touted as the earliest in the Bay Area. "This is a market where traffic is bad, and we can now guarantee a 5:30 a.m. delivery," Harris said.

As for advertisers, they will come with readership that will boost the newspaper's existing base of 2,000 San Francisco subscribers, Harris said. "First we have to build the audience, and that is what our advertising emphasis is on now."

Although the expansion is tantamount to throwing down the gauntlet, the competition doesn't seem to be sweating much, at least not publicly.

Ted Fang told E&P in May that he was more concerned about resolving the antitrust trial than about competing with the Mercury News.

San Francisco Examiner Executive Editor Phil Bronstein said that one more cook in an already crowded kitchen is no big deal to the Examiner, though he did note that the Mercury News is a little late to the party. The expansion, he said, "is a nice try. But it's a little like Napoleon going into Russia in the dead of winter."

Aware of the expansion plan long before it was announced, the Chronicle in May cut its newsstand price from 50 cents to a quarter, but it has done little else while the sale to Hearst remained in limbo. That will likely change now that the sale has been approved. Readers can expect a revitalized Chronicle, perhaps even with Examiner heir Will Hearst running the show, a rumor that has been making the rounds since the antitrust trial began. ▣

'GLOBE' EDITOR WINS A ROUND

Q.: What do the Colorado Supreme Court, JonBenét Ramsey, and a supermarket tabloid have in common? A.:

The case of Craig Lewis.

An editor at the tabloid Globe, Lewis pleaded not guilty in May to criminal extortion and commercial bribery charges stemming from his allegedly questionable news-gathering techniques while covering the JonBenét Ramsey murder. After several failed lower court efforts to derail the case, Lewis last month won a rare review from the state Supreme Court that put his Nov. 6 trial on hold. At issue is whether Colorado's criminal extortion statute is too vague, and the bribery statute too broad, so that they infringe upon Lewis' First Amendment right to gather the news. A decision could be made by October.

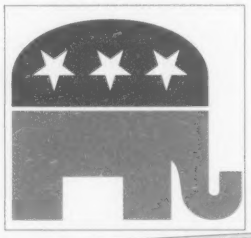
On the case round-the-clock

Presidential politics as unusual

This week in Philadelphia: 'The first Web convention'

BY JOE STRUPP

IF THE NATIONAL POLITICAL CONVENTIONS HAVE gone from exciting, suspense-filled moments of history to boring, rehearsed party commercials — as a number of network TV executives seem to believe — someone forgot to tell the nation's leading newspapers, which are planning their broadest and most in-depth coverage ever.



And for newspaper Web sites — gearing up for 24-hour coverage ranging from hourly updates and research reports to live chats and video discussions — the conventions represent the first chance to show off their latest technological advances and instant reporting methods on a national political stage.

"This will go down in history as the first Web convention," said Dirk Mathison, political editor of latimes.com (http://www.latimes.com), which has 12 staffers on hand for Internet coverage during this week's Republican National Convention in Philadelphia. "Four years ago, Web coverage was practically nonexistent. It will be a real multimedia presentation."

Along with daily newspaper stories online, latimes.com will provide a regular daily Webcast on convention events, hourly updates, and analysis from Los Angeles Times reporters, as well as chats and discussions at the convention. "We will be supplementing the Los Angeles Times coverage," Mathison said.

The story is similar at The New York Times, The Washington Post, The Wall Street Journal, and USA Today, all of which are planning to offer round-the-clock Web coverage in Philadelphia and at the Democratic National Convention in Los Angeles two weeks later. Among the Internet highlights from each publication:

- Washingtonpost.com (http://www.washingtonpost.com), which is doubling its on-site staff at each convention from four in 1996 to eight this year, will have a daily videotaped round-table discussion, a twice-daily Web column from media writer Howard Kurtz, and streaming video of each night's proceedings.
- USAToday.com (http://www.usatoday.com) will offer daily convention Webcasts with streaming video, regular news updates, and two staffers leading chat discussions.
- The New York Times on the Web (http://www.nytimes.com) will double its number of daily online discussions, from one before and after the conventions to two during the events, while offering increased audio and video coverage, Web-only features, and online forums.
- The Wall Street Journal Interactive Edition (http://interactive.wsj.com), a paid service, will beef up coverage with several online-only reporters, daily chats with political guests, and campaign video from C-SPAN.

"One of the major changes is that four years ago you might have spent an hour downloading a brief video snippet," said Mark Stencel, washingtonpost.com political editor. "Now, it's practically in real time."

But editors contend that Web reporting will not replace convention coverage in the print product. On the contrary, many say the daily read will be as big or bigger than ever.

"Our decision about how much to cover in print has very little to do with the Web," said James Roberts, political editor at The New York Times. "There are a lot of events that we need to cover and be on top of."

In each case, editors said they were sending as many staffers, if not more, to each convention. Although they agree that the elements of suspense have dwindled, most say the need for coverage remains — with a challenge to dig up news and keep on top of changing events.

"The more we see it as a coronation, the more pressure that puts on all media to do more enterprise."

— GWEN FLANDERS
USA Today

"The more we see it as a coronation, the more pressure that puts on all media to do more enterprise," said USA Today Political Editor Gwen Flanders, whose paper will send nine editors, 17 reporters, two columnists, and four photo staffers to Philadelphia — a 30% increase over its convention staffing levels in 1996. "It is increasingly so that we are challenged to dig into things and explain the news, and that takes more people."

The Los Angeles Times, which sent 58 people to the 1996 Democratic convention in Chicago, has 70 people in Philadelphia this week. For conventions closer to home, the increase is similar, with 90 Times' editorial employees lined up to report from the Democratic convention in Los Angeles, compared to the 65 who converged on nearby San Diego to cover the Republican convention in 1996.

The Wall Street Journal, which had assigned 12 reporters and editors to convention coverage in 1996, and The Washington Post, which had assigned 16, each say the same numbers of people will be on hand this year. The New York Times and The Associated Press would not specify how many editorial employees were going to the conventions, but said the reporting crews would equal 1996 levels.

"The conventions are still a good story," said Sandy Johnson, the AP's Washington bureau chief. "The conventions also offer a good shot at convergence [of print and online coverage]." ▣

E-mail glitch bugs the media

But there's no flack flak over Dems' exposure of 800-plus addresses

BY STEVE FRIESS
FORT LAUDERDALE, FLA.

THE DEMOCRATIC National Convention Committee admitted last week it accidentally exposed the e-mail addresses of more than 800 political journalists while issuing a press release.

Yet, even as reporters and editors around the nation started receiving unsolicited promotional e-mail from flacks and political activists who obtained the list, a spokesman for the DNCC insisted the list was made up exclusively of journalists' e-mail addresses. "So reporters got the e-mail addresses of other reporters," said Peter Ragone, spokesman for the committee organizing next month's Democratic National Convention in Los Angeles. "That's all."

Ragone's tone last Tuesday was less contrite than the e-mail message sent out by fellow spokeswoman Jennifer Mielenz on Monday, when she apologized for the error. Mielenz wrote that the mistake was caused by a glitch in their e-mail list, and Ragone said Tuesday that the computer itself dumped the address list into the "To:" field instead of the "bcc:" field. Most mass e-mail messages are sent as blind carbon copies to conceal the names of other recipients. The first to use the list was Minnesota Democratic Farm Labor Party spokeswoman Karen Louise Boothe, who sent a note suggesting stories on the Minnesotan delegates to the convention. Boothe refused to comment.

"[It had] all the e-mail addresses anybody in my business would want."

USA MEDIA COMMUNICATIONS

Among other "spam" received by those on the list was an invitation to a party thrown Monday night in Alexandria, Va., by Nick Thimmesch of the Washington-based PR firm USA Media Communications. "This list was all the e-mail addresses anybody in my business would ever want," crowed Thimmesch, who topped his note to those on the list by writing, "Thanks for the great e-mail list!" ▣

CAR SITE SET TO ROLL OUT

The Chicago Sun-Times and the suburban Daily Herald already share some news briefs in each other's papers. Last week, the papers said they will partner in rolling out a consumer Web site they say will have the largest online inventory of new and used cars in Chicago.

DriveChicago.com will launch this fall. The partnership includes the Daily Herald's parent Paddock Publications; Hollinger International Inc.'s Sun-Times, Daily Southtown in Chicago, and Post-Tribune in Gary, Ind., as well as its weekly Pioneer Press and Star Publications groups; and the Chicago Automobile Trade Association.

In addition to displaying classified ads from the newspapers, the site will allow consumers to access information on cars at 650 area dealerships.

CALLERS OFF HOOK, FOR NOW

California newspaper circulators have one less thing to worry about this fall. A proposition to require telemarketers to get people's consent before contacting them won't appear on the November ballot due to a shortfall of signatures.

Bryan Clark, director of circulation services for the California Newspaper Publishers Association, thinks newspapers should be getting away from cold-calling to enlist new subscribers, anyway. "I think if the proposition got on the ballot, it would probably pass by a landslide," he said. Publishers could have skirted such a ban by using out-of-state call centers, but they would have risked bad PR, he said.

MANAGER HELD IN L.A. SLAYING

A manager of a newspaper-distribution warehouse serving the Daily News in Los Angeles has been arrested on suspicion of killing a fellow manager at a Van Nuys, Calif., distribution plant.

According to media reports, Oscar Melendez, 38, was arrested by Los Angeles police after he allegedly shot fellow night-shift manager Moises Escobar, 39, to death Tuesday. Police said the two men had a long-running dispute and that Melendez outranked the victim. The warehouse,

Contentville, KR facing challenges

BY RANDY DOTINGA AND LUCIA MOSES

A FREE-LANCE writers union was nearing an agreement last week with magazine publisher Steven Brill over author rights, while taking on No. 2 newspaper chain Knight Ridder in its campaign to get writers compensated for online publication.

The 5,400-member National Writers Union (NWU) threatened to sue Knight Ridder and more than 100 newspapers that have online archives. The NWU alleges that Knight Ridder is selling old stories without paying authors. The company denies any wrongdoing.

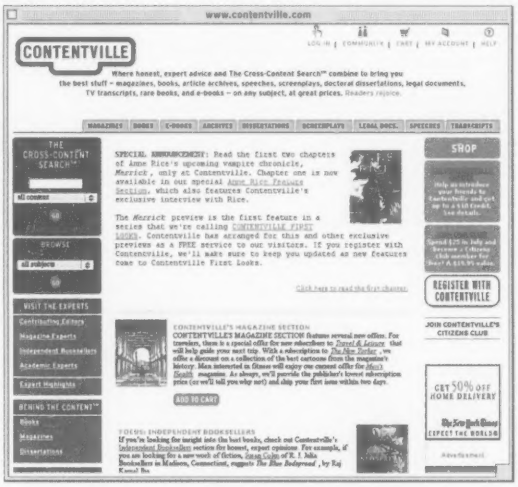
"More and more writers are seeing how pervasive and widespread this problem is," said NWU President Jonathan Tasini.

Prompting the NWU's initiative is a 1999 court ruling that barred the New York Times Co. and other publishers from using free-lancers work in databases without their permission. The case is being appealed.

Brill entered the picture when the NWU complained that Contentville, a spinoff of Brill's Content magazine, included free-lancers' work in its archives without their permission.

Contentville went online July 12, offering archives of magazine articles, screenplays, dissertations, speeches, and TV show transcripts.

"Once people see that publishers and writers can get together, we will see other similar deals coming down the road." — JONATHAN TASINI
NATIONAL WRITERS UNION



The articles cost $2.95 each.

Following a meeting with Tasini last week, Brill said there's no question that writers will be paid for their work appearing on Contentville.

"This can end up being a very significant breakthrough and sort of a way out of the morass and confusion that the rights situation is now in," he said. The main discussion now is about how writers will be able to use Contentville as a clearinghouse for their stories, Brill said. He hinted that he may be leaning toward a royalty system set up by the NWU. It would let writers send their work directly to Contentville, where it will be archived for public access.

On another front, the NWU plans to file informal grievances and possibly a lawsuit against Knight Ridder over its NewsLibrary database, which includes stories from 119 newspapers, Tasini said. The articles go as far back as the 1970s and cost $1.95 each. "This is a financial ticking time bomb," he said.

Knight Ridder spokeswoman Lee Ann Schlatter said the NewsLibrary has content from many non-Knight Ridder newspapers, which Knight Ridder isn't responsible for. She said free-lancers should contact individual newspapers if they have copyright concerns.

The NWU isn't reluctant to go to court, as it did in the Times Co. case and in Boston, where it supports a lawsuit by free-lancers against The Boston Globe over a new licensing agreement contributors have to sign. The agreement, which the Globe said has been signed by some 498, or more than 70% of its most-often used contributors, gives the paper the right to publish their past and future work on its Web site, Boston.com, without additional payment.

But Tasini said he hopes an agreement with Brill will lead other publishers to resolve online archive issues. "One of the things that the industry needs is a model to show that this can work," he said. "Once people see that publishers and writers can get together, we will see other similar deals coming down the road." ▣

A national news weekly for local newspapers

Depth. Context. Understanding. That's what discriminating readers want from the news.

NEWSPRINT BIND TO EASE

The dot-com advertising boom has newsprint suppliers barely able to keep up with demand. But while supplies are the lowest they've been in 20 years, the shortage should ease as dot-com spending wanes and the overall economy begins to slow, said Andrew Battista, an economist with Resource Information Systems Inc.

As for pricing, publishers are counting on a $50-a-ton increase in September. Beyond that, levels will depend most on the economy, linage, and price of recycled paper, Battista said.

Freedom: Short leash, long leash

Press poll results a mixed bag

BY JOE STRUPP

Americans believe the press has too much freedom in general, but are hesitant to curtail specific aspects of news coverage, according to the "State of the First Amendment 2000" poll sponsored by the Freedom Forum's First Amendment Center. The survey, conducted by the Center for Survey Research and Analysis at the University of Connecticut, polled 1,015 adults during two weeks in April.

Among the most notable findings were that 40% of those polled believed Americans have too much press freedom while 14% believed they have too little. These results differ from those of a similar poll in late 1999 in which only 31% believed Americans have too much press freedom. On a different question with similar wording, 51% believed the press in America has too much freedom, up from 42% in the center's 1999 poll.

"We believe Americans have lost sight of the watchdog role of the press," said Kenneth A. Paulson, executive director of the First Amendment Center, based in Nashville, Tenn. "There are disturbing numbers here."

But when it came to specific ways of limiting press coverage, most of those polled wanted to maintain press access to news and information. When asked if news organizations should be allowed to report what they think is important, 67% agreed and only 30% disagreed. On the issue of whether newspapers should be able to publish without government approval, 76% agreed and 20% disagreed.

When asked if newspapers should be allowed to criticize public officials, 77% agreed, with 23% opposing such a view.

On the topic of Internet press freedom, 74% of respondents believed that items on the Web should have the same press freedom protections as those in books or newspapers. ▣

OBITUARIES

Robert Bryan

76, Died July 18

FORMER OWNER AND PUBLISHER OF THE CULLMAN (ALA.) TIMES

An Alabama newspaperman who built a successful newspaper group by clustering his papers and taking strong editorial stands, Robert Bryan died July 18 of complications from a brain aneurysm.

Bryan moved to Cullman in 1951 to manage the weekly Cullman Banner, where he served as "ad salesman, reporter, photographer, printer, floor sweeper, and typist." Two months later, he was part owner. With the help of business partners, Bryan then purchased The Cullman Democrat and merged the two weeklies into a daily, The Times-Democrat (since renamed The Cullman Times), of which he later became sole owner. He used much the same formula in 1968, purchasing two competing weeklies that were merged into the daily Athens News Courier.

Bryan Newspapers, which by 1973 included three weeklies, derived economic benefits from being located within a 60-mile radius, yet Bryan understood that they were valueless if they didn't inform and serve their communities. Bryan used his editorials to boldly address local issues, and took pains to ensure his papers always printed both sides of an issue. "We don't have to be afraid to publish anything, but we have to be fair." When he retired in 1997, Bryan Newspapers was the largest independent newspaper group in Alabama.

Thomas Quinn Curtiss

85, Died July 17

LONGTIME FILM AND THEATER CRITIC FOR THE INTERNATIONAL HERALD TRIBUNE IN PARIS

Curtiss, who studied film and theater in Moscow and Vienna, Austria, wrote columns for The New York Times and the now-defunct New York Herald Tribune during the 1960s. After Curtiss moved to Paris, he became a fixture both in the International Herald Tribune and in Paris' trendiest restaurants.

Bob Henderson

65, Died July 23

RETIRED ST. PETERSBURG (FLA.) TIMES EDITOR AND COLUMNIST

Henderson, who spent 35 years at the Times, died of a stroke while recovering from quadruple bypass heart surgery. As the Times' Clearwater editor, Henderson played a key role in expanding the breadth and depth of the local news reports and the Clearwater news team. In addition, he wrote a local column three or four times a week. He retired in 1997.

John Mooney

84, Died July 27

FORMER SPORTS EDITOR FOR THE SALT LAKE TRIBUNE

Mooney spent more than 51 years covering sports in Salt Lake City. He began at the old Salt Lake Telegram in 1939, and later moved to The Salt Lake Tribune. Mooney was named Utah's Sportswriter of the Year seven times, and was the first sports writer to be inducted into the Utah Foundation Sports Hall of Fame. Upon his retirement in 1990, Mooney noted he was proud to be "one of the few sports writers in history to have written in seven different decades."

Wardell Winslow

73, Died July 7

RETIRED MANAGING EDITOR OF THE PENINSULA TIMES TRIBUNE IN PALO ALTO, CALIF.

Winslow joined his hometown Palo Alto Times as a reporter in 1948, and after he returned from service as a naval officer in the Korean War, became the paper's associate editor and chief editorial writer. When the Times and the Redwood City Tribune merged to create The Peninsula Times Tribune in 1979, he was named editorial pages editor, and was appointed managing editor two years later.

FREE PRESS ON 'THE REZ'

New press act adopted by the Cherokee Nation symbolizes growing momentum to unshackle journalists at tribal papers

NATIVE AMERICAN JOURNALism was born amid the harshest censorship. When the aptly named Cherokee Phoenix began publishing 172 years ago in New Echota, Ga., it immediately incurred the wrath of U.S. authorities and much of the Cherokee people for its reporting on the emerging story that became the historical tragedy known as the Trail of Tears. Georgia militiamen and white vigilantes repeatedly shot at and vandalized the Phoenix for reporting on the removal of the Cherokee from their Southern homes to the alien terrain of the desert West. At the same time, many Cherokee attacked the paper's first editor, Elias Boudinot, as a traitor to his people for supporting the removal. Boudinot was driven from the paper and later assassinated for his views. The Phoenix continued to rise and write — until it was burned to the ground in 1834 and frustrated soldiers threw its printing press down a well.

Revived as the Cherokee Advocate, the newspaper in modern times became an unfortunate symbol of the censorship tribal authorities on many reservations are sometimes so quick to impose. In the summer of 1997, then-Principal Chief Joe Byrd became angry at the way the paper was covering the political turmoil in his administration. In truth, the coverage was not exactly hard-hitting given the extent of the tribal crisis. Nevertheless, Byrd fired Editor Dan Agent and the paper's entire five-person newsroom.

Now the Cherokee Nation has a new principal chief, with a decidedly different attitude toward the tribe-owned newspaper. "If I am doing something wrong, the Cherokee people need to be able to read about it in the Advocate," Principal Chief Chad Smith said as the Tribal Council passed the Free and Independent Press Act earlier this month.

The law proclaims that the newspaper's editorial board members "must serve their terms of office free from political influence" of nation officials. Members cannot be removed without a hearing before the tribe's highest court. By law, they must "adhere to the standards of accepted ethics of journalism as defined by the Society of Professional Journalists and endorsed by the Native American Journalists Association." The act has its flaws: The chief and Tribal Council, who each will pick one of the three members, can easily stamp their influence on the board. Still, Smith has pledged not to interfere with the Advocate, and even supporters of former Principal Chief Byrd now say the nation is best served by a paper that tells the good, the bad, and the ugly about tribal affairs.

The people of the Indian nations ... have no reservations about a free press.

That's a message tribal officials are learning throughout Indian country. It's no accident that Principal Chief Smith won election after campaigning on a free-press platform. Indian leaders are finding that their constituents increasingly respect the professionalizing of papers produced by a new generation of Native American journalists who fight official censorship and reject self-censorship. The people of the Indian nations are speaking — and they have no reservations about a free press.

The NEW FACE of WEATHER COVERAGE

At a climactic moment, hot data and cool charts carry the page

BY DAVID NOACK

EVERYONE TALKS ABOUT THE WEATHER, but newspapers are finally doing something about it. While they're not yet able to control Mother Nature, they may be doing the next best thing: empowering readers with information to cope with the weather and other aspects of their environment.

George Rorick, who helped design USA To-

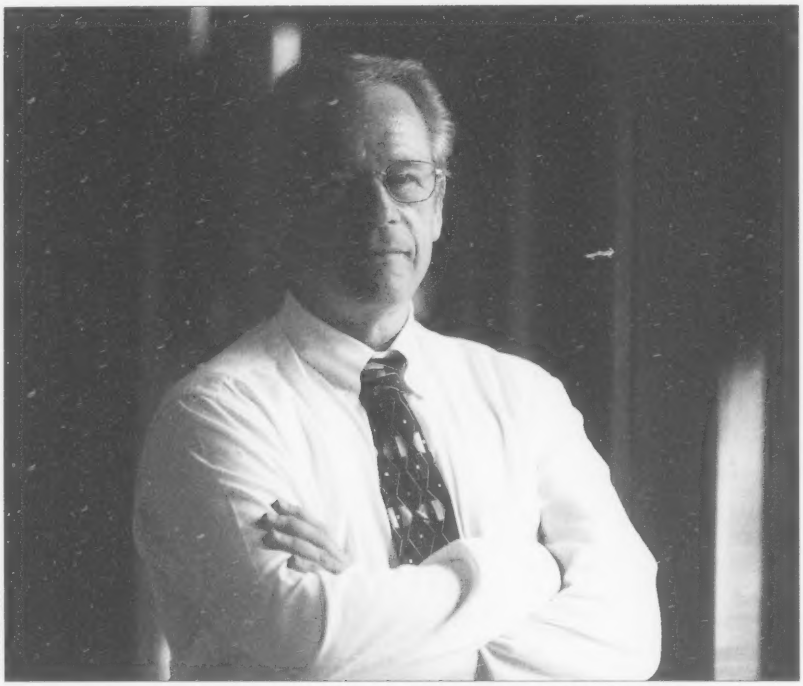
DAVE MORRISON

George Rorick (above) and Richard Curtis (right) created the groundbreaking USA Today weather page in 1982. Curtis, who is still at the paper, recalls that all they were trying to do was present information that readers want "in a form they want it, can enjoy reading it, and learn from it."

LESLIE SMITH/USA TODAY



DAVE MORRISON

All over the map: Rorick recalls that when he started working on the first, all-color USA Today weather page, "People thought it was a silly idea," perhaps because no one "had done it before."

day's pioneering weather page in 1982, has a simple explanation for profound reader fascination with the weather: it affects everybody. That interest — along with frequent newspaper redesigns, more colorful maps, improved technology, better weather information, and competition among papers — has fueled a near-revolutionary revamping of the nation's weather pages.

"Weather is a common element," observes Rorick. "It affects your mood, what you're going to do, but the thing that I found most interesting with the USA Today weather page was that people who lived in Florida had not always lived there and wanted to know about the weather back in Michigan. I think people just like to look at the weather page and wish they were elsewhere — or feel glad they are not."

Gone are the days of "Your Father's" weather page, which gave readers the meteorological equivalent of name, rank, and serial number: the temperature, a brief forecast, and a basic — and usually bland — national map. Today's weather pages are color-saturated, with more information than ever before, and more than 91 cities are represented on the map. The maps were redrawn by the AP's Washington bureau from a larger Weather Bureau map.

Then, in 1982, a seismic change occurred when USA Today made its debut — with what became the prototype for many contemporary weather pages. — David Noack

THE WEATHER.

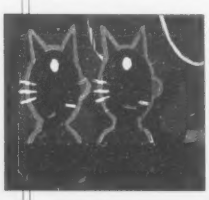
THE WEATHER.

The climes, they are a-changin': The weather report in The New York Times on May 6, 1915 (right), wasn't much to look at. Weather map in the New York Daily News on Nov. 27, 1963 (far right), was hardly more than a thumbnail.

A LITTLE HISTORY

THE WEATHER AS HIGH DRAMA, OUR ongoing struggle against the uncontrollable forces of nature — that's one way Mark Monmonier, a professor of geography at Syracuse University, describes how the news media portray the weather. While man has always battled the elements — whether hurricanes, tornadoes, droughts, or blizzards — weather news is now much more compelling, thanks to improved reporting, forecasting, and graphics.

Monmonier's book, "Air Apparent," provides a fascinating look at the evolution of the weather map. For newspapers, it is a tale of two histories, notes Monmonier, "one of treating print journalism as an information industry and the other addressing weather warnings as timely public information."



The first American newspaper to publish a weather map was the New York Herald in 1876, but it was done more as a gimmick than a permanent fixture, for an international exposition in Philadelphia celebrating the 100th anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence.

It wasn't until 1912 — when the federal government's Weather Bureau, then under the auspices of the Department of Agriculture, began to produce a graphic that newspapers could use — that the weather map appeared on a regular basis in many papers. Soon, 147 newspapers with a combined circulation of more than 3 million were publishing the commercial weather map in 91 cities. But battles between the Weather Bureau and Congress over funding made map production and dissemination a hit-or-miss proposition. "Present-day newspaper weather maps only faintly resemble their turn-of-the-century cousins ... which the Weather Bureau hoped to educate citizens, justify its existence, and explain failed forecasts," writes Monmonier.

On Jan. 1, 1935, The Associated Press began its Wirephoto network, a facsimile system for delivering pictures. The initial 39 subscribers to the service also received daily weather maps, one for afternoon newspapers and another for morning pa-rated, data-intensive, graphic-laden, locally focused, and crammed with more information than most readers dreamed possible (or, in many cases, even desired).

But despite all the changes in the weather page, its basic mission remains the same: to provide the latest and most accurate information so that people can plan their days, whether it's bringing an umbrella to work or simply wondering how hot it's going to get out where Aunt Betty lives.

You don't need a weatherman?

The coming of age of the weather page can be attributed to several factors.

The graphics element got a jump-start in September 1982 when USA Today arrived, and with it the first full-color weather page. That was followed by the introduction of better technology — powerful computers, graphics software and improved color presses — to provide eye-catching weather pages even in small markets.

Newspapers now often choose to showcase their new weather roundups on the back page of a section, rather than on the inside, and to give them anywhere from one-half to a full page of space. Weather pages now routinely include dew-point readings, statistics, and almanacs; air quality, pollen, and allergy information; an ultraviolet index; tidal, marine, river, and reservoir data; and even earthquake, road, commuter, and traffic conditions.

Even the staid New York Times now has a "Weather Report" that consumes two-thirds of a page, complete with color maps, numerous charts, temperature listings for over 150 cities, and "focus" items on weather phenomena, such as last week's description of a "derecho" (a long-lived wind storm).

But the evolution of the weather page, from changes in layout to content to placement, has been an ongoing task for newspapers. Reader surveys and focus groups have helped guide papers in reshaping it. Incessant newspaper redesigns and growing reliance on color have also contributed to a more contemporary look.

These changes are obvious to most readers. Mainly invisible to them is the fact that newspapers actually have little to do with gathering the information that appears on their weather page. The bulk of the work is done by forecasting and consulting companies that either sell customized weather pages to hundreds of newspapers directly or transmit them via syndicates (such as Tribune Media Services or the Los Angeles Times Syndicate). These services do collaborate with the newspapers on tailoring a weather page to suit the needs of local readers.

Some of the leading services, which provide camera-ready pages, include Accu-Weather, State College, Pa.; Weather Data, Wichita, Kan.; Weather Central, Madison, Wis.; and the Weather Channel, Atlanta, Ga. Typically, their contracts with the newspaper gives reporters access to the company's meteorologists when a major weather story breaks and they want to consult an expert.

Chuck Sholdt, vice president of Weather Central, feels that one problem remains: Weather information, he admits, "is dated by the time it's published," which puts newspapers at a disadvantage with radio and the Internet (see story, p. 29). But, he observes, "we are getting much better" at providing "a sense of immediacy."

But it is USA Today that is credited for elevating the lowly weather page to its present place of prominence.

Changing climate

The two men most responsible for the way newspaper weather pages look today are Richard Curtis and George Rorick, who together created the first USA Today weather-page concept. Curtis, now managing editor for graphics and photography at the newspaper, says all they were trying to do is present information readers want "in a form they want it, can enjoy reading it, and learn from it."

Rorick, who now teaches graphics at the Poynter Institute, said that until USA Today founder Allen Neuharth broached the idea of a new type of weather page, newspaper weather sections were typically culled from The Associated Press or United Press International wires. "At USA Today, our idea was to do something different ... and people thought it was a silly idea. No one had done it before. I volunteered to create a page and worked on many, many designs." Two prototype weather pages were created: one black and white for inside, and a color page for an outside position.

Looking back, Rorick says that creating graphics for the USA Today weather page — really just a "visualization of data" — helped spread the use of colorful graphics to other stories throughout the paper. "We picked up a lot of good production skills and a lot of shortcuts," he notes.

In his book, "Air Apparent: How Meteorologists Learned to Map, Predict, and Dramatize Weather," Mark Monmonier notes that USA Today's innovation had a major impact on the eventual success of the paper. "This vivid display," writes Monmonier, "quickly became a symbol of Gannett Corporation's new national daily newspaper." Once USA Today took the lead, other papers followed.

But revamping a weather page is not done in a vacuum. Weather-page makeovers are usually accompanied by a redesign of the entire newspaper. Over the last few years, newspapers have been in redesign mode, partly to accommodate the new 50-inch Web press. Here's a quick look around at the new national "weather map":

Memphis, Tenn.

Henry A. Stokes, managing editor of The Commercial Appeal in Memphis, admits that at one time his newspaper's weather page was not high on the agenda. The page never had a "home" in the paper; it was typically shuffled to whatever space was available. But now the weather page has pride of place on the back of the sports section.

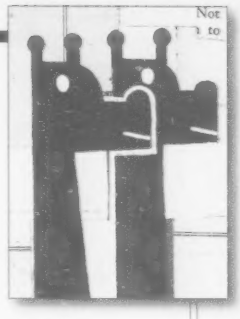
"We run local weather with some graphics," explains Stokes, "regional forecasts, a long list of cities. It's still a half-page package that we designed about five years ago when we contracted with a [weather] service to get paginated downloads."

South Bend, Ind.

But relying on an established formula in today's 24/7 data-saturated world, can be risky.

Ray Leliaert, night editor of the South Bend Tribune, explains that as part of a redesign effort, when the paper went to mornings five years ago, readers were asked about weather coverage. The evening Tribune had devoted much of a back page to weather. A series of focus groups and forums found, surprisingly, that readers relied less and less on the newspaper, getting weather information from other sources, such as TV, radio, and the Internet.

The outcome: the paper downsized its weather page, while revising its content. "With the debut of the morning Tribune, we heard immediately from many readers about what was missing from the weather package. This reaction, in the form of complaints and suggestions, taught us that our readers look to us for much more than the daily forecast," says Leliaert. For example, almanac-type information — featuring the previous day's high and low temperatures — is important to readers who keep journals.



"Out-of-town temperatures and conditions are important ways to stay in touch for readers who have family and friends in other cities," the Tribune's Leliaert adds. "In fact, requests for more cities top all forms of reader feedback about our weather package."

Kansas City, Mo.

David Eames, deputy editor for graphics and design at The Kansas City Star, reveals that the weather page has been "tweaked" since the paper's redesign two years ago. And his paper, like others, has established cross-promotional ties with a local TV station, in this case, KMBC, an ABC affiliate.

This is a win-win for the newspaper and TV station. The on-air weather person pens a small column or answers questions for the newspaper. In turn, the newspaper gets promoted during the weathercast. "This is a very hands-off thing for us," Eames explains. "We download it and drop it on the page and it's done. It's a pretty clean operation."

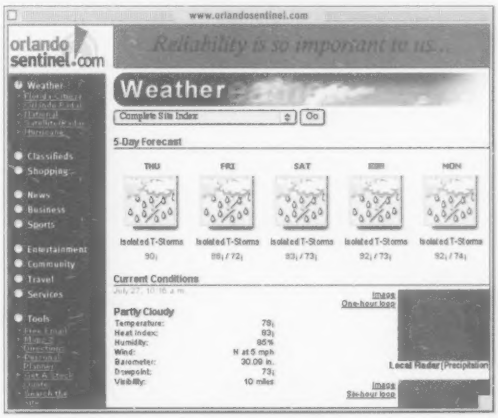
WEB WEATHER

Of all the online news topics, such as sports, entertainment, politics, technology, foreign news, and the weather, which one is the most popular? If you predicted the weather, you'd be right.

According to a recent survey by the Pew Research Center for the People and the Press, 66% of people who go online for news end up at weather Web sites, or the weather sections of newspaper Web sites, to find out the latest forecast, track a newly named storm, download a weather program, or view satellite images.

The popularity of the Internet as a source for weather reports "is underscored by growth in the number of women getting online weather," says the Pew report. "Even as more women have started getting news online on a regular basis, the share of those women who get weather updates on the Internet has jumped substantially."

But you don't have to tell that to Ricardo Cheriel. He already knows weather content is a key part of online news sites. Cheriel, senior producer for Tribune Interactive, the online division of the Chicago-based Tribune Co., provides content for the company's newspaper and TV Web sites, and he knows weather is hot.



He's also in charge of WeatherPoint, a product of Tribune Media Services, which is sold to newspapers that want customized local weather content for their Web sites. It features current weather conditions and extended forecasts for more than 1,000 U.S. cities and more than 200 international cities. Current weather conditions are updated hourly; forecasts are updated three times a day. "We also have satellite and radar maps, updated every half-hour, covering the U.S. and other regions of the world," reports Cheriel. Time-lapse radar images show the movement of weather patterns. Print newspapers, of course, have no ability to update their daily forecasts.

Stormy weather may be bad for business and vacation planning, but it spells increased Web traffic. "Any type of severe weather drives our weather traffic higher," Cheriel notes. "Hurricanes are especially popular with users. Our sites in Florida have seen their weather traffic increase 50 times normal levels when a hurricane threatens the U.S. coastline." When Hurricane Floyd skirted Florida's east coast last year, the Web sites of The Orlando Sentinel and the Sun-Sentinel in Fort Lauderdale each had roughly 250,000 page views daily on Floyd-related stories, maps, and emergency preparedness information.

Sacramento, Calif.

Bob Casey, Sunday editor at The Sacramento Bee, says the paper plans to add color on the weather page and "spruce it up," possibly with "some sort of centerpiece, like a Sacramento Valley forecast in 3D." He adds that one way for newspapers to make their weather pages distinctive is to offer nonweather-related information.

"In our area particularly," he explains, "what readers are keenly interested in is water storage numbers. A lot of people with boats, they navigate the rivers, people with houseboats on the reservoirs, they watch those water levels. ... And also this is a very high air pollution area. They watch the smog and ozone, and I can see us taking those numbers and putting it more into chart form," says Casey.

Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

Earl Maucker, editor of the Sun-Sentinel in Fort Lauderdale, says that since the paper was redesigned in 1998, it's been adding more cities and a larger national map to the weather page. "A huge portion of our page is devoted to tides, tropical weather, and ocean conditions," observes Maucker. "Keep in mind that Fort Lauderdale is the yachting capital of the world, so we have substantial resources committed to boating conditions, wind speeds, sea waves, a lot of marine information; we run the high and low tides; we do the sun and moon because they affect the tides. We also run phone numbers for local beach conditions."

And he believes that since visitors to South Florida come mainly for the climate, it's important that weather information be accurate. "As far as I'm concerned, it's a major local story every day," he notes. The paper also uses weather "spotters," people who get a free subscription to the paper for reporting rain totals and monitoring the weather.

Seattle

In mid-June, the Seattle Post-Intelligencer's new color weather page made its debut. It was one of the last steps in what Executive Editor Neal Pattison calls a serial redesign of the paper, done in stages.

After looking at a lot of weather pages around the country, "We designed our own maps, and we wanted to be able to add our own indexes that are important to our own readers," Pattison relates. "We did not want to use color in any trivial way," says Pattison, who adds that some newspapers use color decoratively, rather than to convey information. Since Seattle is such a "water town, " and fishing is a major industry in the Pacific Northwest, Pattison is pushing for more ocean weather information.

Response to the new weather page has been positive, but Pattison likens it to getting a call from your mother: While flush with praise, there's always that one area that could use improvement. In the redesign, for example, "We overlooked something that had been on our old, little weather page, the daily national extremes, the highest temperature and the lowest temperatures in the lower 48 states," Pattison reveals. "Readers noticed that right away, and we got that right in."

Weather outlook

And now, what of the future? Brad Scarborough, director of sales for commercial weather services at Accu-Weather, says competition among papers guarantees ever more lavish weather pages. "It's a very competitive industry," he observes. "If you see a newspaper that is making a step forward and kind of bucking the trend and is kind of successful with it, you will see a lot of other papers come on board. They realize that if they don't, they may lose circulation, and that's what's most important to them."

Is there a point of weather information overload, where readers are bombarded with too much data? Scarborough believes the trick is to make the information appealing with graphics so readers don't feel overwhelmed. Back in 1982, many professionals poked fun at the colorful USA Today "McPaper" weather page, but now we can expect even more facts, and graphics.

George Rorick, who helped establish graphic-driven weather pages as the standard, says the next step for newspapers — you might call it "USA Tomorrow" — will be online animated information.

"You will see animation graphics that will explain the weather," he predicts, "an archive of weather situations that are important to your area and the world." For threatening storms, animated maps will foretell the storm's path, and the Web will be quick to provide damage updates "and even video or still frames live from the scene. The Internet," says Rorick, "will be the next public service area of growth for weather information." ▣

LAUNCH PUTS FREE-D

Success hinges on fat ad-filled issues & lean editorial ranks

BY LUCIA MOSES

WITH PAPERS IN ASPEN, COLO., AND PALO ALTO, Calif., among others, David Danforth has shown it's possible to publish a daily newspaper with no circulation revenue or circulation-verification system. But can such a model work in a market with an established paid and audited daily?

Time will soon tell. On June 5, two of Danforth's partners rolled out a free-distribution daily in New Hampshire, where they have already started two others. This one is in Laconia, a tourist town of about 15,000. The founders picked Laconia because it is relatively close to Conway, where the paper is printed. The town is already served by the Laconia Citizen, a paid daily.

In a nutshell, here is Danforth's business model: Produced by a lean staff, the tabloid papers are distributed in the mornings via businesses and newspaper boxes, thus keeping personnel costs low. The main idea is that rock-bottom ad rates will attract volume — and that advertisers won't mind not being able to verify circulation when they realize the paper, strong on local news, is well-read.

The formula has kept The Conway Daily Sun in business for 11 years. The paper, which was started by Danforth's partners, has five news staffers plus an editor. The paper runs 36 to 40 pages, and claims a distribution of 15,000.

Wayne Willman, sales manager at Miller Auto Outlet, which serves the Conway area, was reluctant to advertise in The Conway Daily Sun until he saw that it wasn't a shopper paper. "I've always been against free papers, but this one's widely read and draws tremendously for me," he says.

"It's free. Everyone grabs one," says Ben-

New Hampshire: Live, free daily, or die!

Big question: Does it pay to give it away?

FREE ALTERNATIVE WEEKLIES ARE gaining popularity with national advertisers. Traditional newspapers are discounting subscriptions while giving away their content on the Internet. And a small — but growing — number of free-distribution daily papers are thriving. Are we moving toward a universe where all news will be gratis?

Mark Guerringue, who, with his partners, has launched free dailies in New Hampshire, believes the idea isn't as crazy as it once was. "I think the concept of free distribution doesn't seem so foreign now," he says.

It's certainly true that the industry is moving toward readership as a measurement of reach. At the urging of publishers, the Audit Bureau of Circulations last year rolled out its Reader Profile program, which sets standards for readership research and audits readership studies by newspapers.

But paid circulation is here to stay — for now. Many advertisers still demand audited circulation figures. "Free" still conjures up the image of weeklies that are predominantly advertising vehicles.

"There still is the association among some advertisers that 'paid' is synonymous with 'wantedness,'" says John Murray, vice president of circulation and marketing for the Newspaper Association of America (NAA).

Gregg Knowles, a former newspaper publisher who's now a Montclair, Calif.-based media broker, is skeptical about free dailies. "I think it would be very difficult for advertisers to track how many people are picking it up," he says.

Guerringue admits that some advertisers are leery of their model for that very reason. But he and his partners say their strategy of offering low ad rates — and keeping costs down by eliminating the circulation department — works. "We make profits that are consistent with the industry standard," he says.

Publishers of paid dailies, meanwhile, are reluctant to give up circulation revenue, which generally contributes a precious one-fifth of total revenue.

Owners of free dailies argue that while their paid competitors plow money into retaining and adding subscribers, overall daily circulation continues to stagnate. In addition, newspapers have been having a tougher time raising their sales prices in recent years, according to NAA figures.

In a white paper published in May, an NAA task force says the industry will have to evaluate circulation's return on investment at some point: "If examined, the true cost of subscriber churn will likely drive newspapers to rethink the current model." — Lucia Moses jamin Gutowski, a longtime advertiser who owns the local Sears, Roebuck and Co. outlet. "They're the primary paper."

It's a different story in Laconia, where The Laconia Daily Sun is going up against the Citizen, a 9,200-circulation daily with a 75-year history.

Ed Engler, the Daily Sun's publisher and co-owner, says none of the paper's staffers come from Laconia, which has made for a steep learning curve. But being free seems to lower expectations of the paper, and people have responded positively, albeit with surprise and skepticism, he says. The paper drops off 3,000 copies at 50 locations, but plans to expand distribution in response to demand from businesses that want copies in their stores, he says.

The hope is that more advertising, now a trickle, will start to flow. Engler says the idea is that "you reach a critical mass on distribution where it's just obvious you've got to be in that paper."

Citizen Executive Editor John Howe downplays the newcomer, pointing to his paper's history and solid coverage of local news. "The Laconia Citizen is certainly a long-established, very heavy local content newspaper," observes Tom Brown, publisher of the Concord (N.H.) Monitor, which prints a Laconia edition. "If the Sun is going to be a local newspaper, they're going to have to invest quite a bit." ▣

NET MOVIE DATABASE: ONE SITE, MANY USES

Imagination is the key to unlocking a portal to pop culture

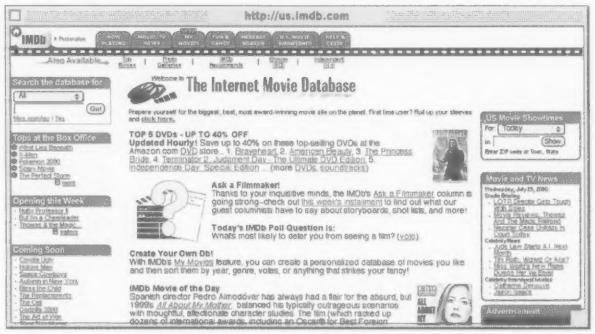
BY CHARLES BOWEN

A GREAT INTERNET DATABASE ORIGINALLY INTENDED for just one narrow application sometimes can be put to scores of other imaginative uses by enterprising editors and reporters. The Internet Movie Database is a case in point.

For starters, you couldn't ask for a better resource for film reviews and summaries of movies around the world. More than 100,000 films are covered, starting with a little-known 1898 British novelty called "Express Train on a Railway Cutting."

But because of flexible searching options, the database can do much more than simply look up movies. In the right hands, it also is a powerful tool for researching all kinds of entertainment stories, from movies to video to TV to books to music, and it's a reservoir of facts on general pop culture. For instance, it can answer questions as diverse as:

- Was it Bette Davis or Greta Garbo who starred in 1950's "Sunset Boulevard"? (Neither. It was Gloria Swanson.)
- Did Elton John ever appear in a movie? You mean, before "Tommy" in 1974? (Yes. "Born to Boogie" in 1972.) Has he done movie soundtracks? (Absolutely, from the 1971 "Friends" score to 1995's "Toy Story.")
- We all know who said, "Hasta la vista, baby," but what was the movie? ("Terminator 2: Judgment Day" in 1991.) And how do we spell that guy's last name? (Schwarzenegger.)
- Have any movies ever been made based on J.D. Salinger's books or stories? (A Salinger short story, "Uncle Wiggily in Connecticut," provided the plot for a Dana Andrews/Susan Hayward vehicle, "My Foolish Heart," in 1949.) And here's a curious footnote. His novel, "Franny and Zooey," was the basis for a 1995 Iranian film called "Pari." It was in Farsi, incidentally, which may be why you didn't see it at the video store.



This far-reaching database started in 1989 as an informal project on an Internet bulletin board. Today, as an advertiser-sponsored feature, it is one of the more active sites on the Net.

To use the database, visit the site at http://us.imdb.com and click on the "Search" option at the top of the screen. This opens query boxes where you can enter keywords or phrases to locate a movie or TV show by title (either the exact name or a portion of the name), a cast or crew member by name (actor, actress, director, writer, etc.), or even a fictional character.

The strength of the database is its extensive use of hypertext links, which invite creative research. For example, it can be searched for subjects such as soundtracks, quotations, release dates, awards, and plot summaries. Even on-screen goofs can be located, as well as crazy movie credits in spoofs such as "Airplane" and "The Naked Gun." For more esoteric research, use the "Extended Search" option on the site's first page. This produces a fill-in-the-blank form with which you can search by genre, year of release, special effects, production company, language, and so on.

One search option here — location — should be a hit with travel writers. If you were writing a story about Cincinnati, you could use this option to learn about the 16 movies that were shot, in full or in part, in the Queen City over the years. ▣

In the classified ad race

PAPERS STILL HOLD A LEADERSHIP POSITION

Print-to-online migration of classified ads may be under way, but, at this time, they provide 40% of newspaper ad revenue

BY LUCIA MOSES

AT A RECENT GATHERING OF CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING directors, Val Kurapka, president of the Newspaper Association of America's (NAA) Classified Federation, gave the good news first: Newspapers are still one of the first places people go to look for a car, house, or job, as evidenced by a 6.7% gain in industry classified revenue in the first quarter. Then came the bad news: Well-heeled online players are threatening to take a significant bite out of a major revenue source.

Classifieds account for some 40% of newspaper ad revenue and are considered the revenue source most at risk from the Internet because they lend themselves to easy searches.

"The Forresters and Jupiters of the world, I think, have a ... misconception of what the classified marketplace is."

— JAMES CONAGHAN
NEWSPAPER ASSOCIATION OF AMERICA

Within classifieds, recruitment is not only the biggest single category but also the one most at risk because that's where the most dollars are being spent. That's what prompted the Tribune Co. and Knight Ridder to decide to buy two job sites, CareerBuilder Inc. and CareerPath.com Inc. and roll them into a single company.

How great is the online threat? No one really knows, but there are some scary figures out there.

Jupiter Communications has forecasted online classified revenue will reach $1.4 billion in 2005 (6% of total print classified), from $270 million (1%) in 1999.

A Forrester Research Inc. prediction is even more dire, calling for online ad revenue to increase to $8.2 billion in 2005 from $1.2 billion in 2000. Forrester also said print classified, which reached $18.6 billion last year, will stall at $17.1 billion in 2005.

Jupiter has projected that print-to-online migration, plus erosion due to free and discounted classifieds, will cost newspapers $4.1 billion in 2005. "These projections promise anything but a rosy future for many businesses relying on classifieds listing revenue," a Jupiter report stated.

Newspaper analysts are quick to attack such forecasts as baseless. "That kind of long-term forecast has a very shaky track record," said James Conaghan, the NAA's chief market analyst, who doesn't forecast beyond a year. He and others said the Internet research firms also ignore the bigger threat to newspapers posed by phone directories, niche papers, and shoppers. Of the $61.5-billion classified ad spending pie, newspapers are getting 26.2% while only half of 1% is going online.

"The Forresters and Jupiters of the world, I think, have a fundamental misconception of what the classified marketplace is," Conaghan said.

Yet the NAA's own research shows that while newspapers were the leading source for job seekers in 1999 (77%), 40% used online sources. Among car buyers, 56% cited newspapers as most helpful in choosing a dealer, while 12% cited the Internet.

Jay R. Smith
PRESIDENT
COX NEWSPAPERS

While Forrester and others say newspapers should strike deals to amass online listings from other sources, there's no consensus among publishers. "Industry efforts such as CareerPath.com and Classified Ventures may provide the allure of safety in numbers, but the slow pace of committee-based decision-making doesn't work in the online world," Forrester stated in a May report.

Meanwhile, Cox Newspapers Inc., one of five companies that is selling its stake in CareerPath.com, believes the future lies in local sites that could be extended regionally through coalitions with neighboring papers. To that end, Cox has diluted its stake in CareerPath.com and focused on developing online listings with targeted search capability in its newspaper markets.

"There's nobody that has found the killer application of online classifieds, and a viable option is for local newspaper sites to just get a heck of a lot stronger," Cox Newspapers President Jay R. Smith said.

The NAA is trying to get newspapers to label their online classifieds with its Bonafide Classified brand, but the campaign has been slow to catch on, with only 535 NAA members out of more than 2,000 total actively using it.

Kurapka is pushing a bolder idea of a classified database of all newspapers in the United States, although he conceded the difficulty of carrying out an industrywide project. "This is a monumental challenge," he said.

Newspaper consultant Miles E. Groves said there's no reason to take an either/or approach. "Local is the key franchise, but we're a mobile economy where people change jobs very quickly. I think it makes sense to focus on local and national." ▣

Unconventional wisdom

COLUMNIST CREATES COUNTER-CONFABS

LATS writer Arianna Huffington helped organize two gatherings that will 'shadow' the Republican and Democratic conventions

BY DAVE ASTOR

SOME SYNDICATED COLUMNISTS COVER POLITICAL CONVENtions. Arianna Huffington helps organize them, too. She and Internet entrepreneur Peter Hirshberg came up with the idea for the "Shadow Conventions" that are running concurrently with this week's Republican convention in Philadelphia and the Aug. 13-17 Democratic gathering in Los Angeles. The counter-meetings are designed to bring attention to issues the two major parties are mostly ignoring, and to be more entertaining than the tightly controlled regular conventions.

Even before the GOP shadow convention started yesterday, it and its upcoming Democratic version were receiving plenty of attention from the likes of The Boston Globe, the Los Angeles Times, The Philadelphia Inquirer, the San Jose (Calif.) Mercury News, Reuters, and other media outlets.

"Political journalists are frustrated that the two parties have turned their conventions into completely scripted floor shows."

— ARIANNA HUFFINGTON, COLUMNIST

"I'm amazed both by the amount and seriousness of the coverage," Huffington told E&P. "It seems to be a reflection of the vacuum the two parties have left. Political journalists are frustrated that the two parties have turned their conventions into completely scripted floor shows."

WAR OF THE COLUMNISTS

There's been some criticism, too. Creators Syndicate columnist Robert Novak wrote that John McCain's scheduled July 30 appearance at the first shadow confab "upsets Republican leaders," that the conventions have a "distinct far-left aroma," and that Huffington is a "political gadfly."

The Los Angeles Times Syndicate (LATS)-distributed Huffington responded with a July 21 column of her own. She wrote, "If you want to know why so few politicians have the courage to take even mildly controversial stands, why the vast majority of modern political rhetoric has been reduced to pointless pablum, and why so much of the public says it hates the media, look no further than this week's column by Bob Novak," who she called a "nattering Novak of negativism."

Huffington, a former Republican insider who has moved toward progressive populism during the past five years, said the shadow conventions are "designed as nonpartisan events aimed at spotlighting three issues ... left unaddressed by both major parties."

The trio of issues includes the need for campaign-finance reform, the increasing gap between the rich and poor, and the "failed drug war" — which features inequities such as harsher sentences for blacks who use crack cocaine than for whites who use powdered cocaine.

Groups involved in the shadow conventions include Common Cause, the National Campaign for Jobs and Income Support, the Lindesmith Center-Drug Policy Foundation, and others.

Confirmed or possible speakers include U.S. Sens. Russ Feingold, D-Wis., and Paul Wellstone, D-Minn.; U.S. Reps. Tom Campbell, R-Calif., and John Lewis, D-Ga.; Gov. Gary Johnson, R-N.M.; the Rev. Jesse Jackson; actor Warren Beatty; author Jonathan Kozol; and other well-known people. Everyday citizens will speak as well.

The shadow conventions will also feature music, satirical performances, and more. There will even be a reprise of Huffington's and comedian/writer Al Franken's "Strange Bedfellows" routine of 1996. This time, Franken will argue for Al Gore as the lesser of two presidential evils, while Huffington will be in the "pox on both houses" camp.

HER POLITICAL PHILOSOPHY

Huffington describes herself as progressive and populist rather than liberal, noting that the last designation conveys the idea that government has all the solutions. "I remain convinced that without some real citizen engagement [along with government dollars], we will not be able to solve problems," said the columnist, who has authored eight books.

Huffington added that writing her semiweekly column, which runs in more than 100 papers, has been a major factor in her political metamorphosis. She explained that, as she researches her pieces, she continually learns about — and is outraged by — various problems and inequities in American life. These include the three issues being spotlighted at the shadow conventions.

Organizing the gatherings has been a collaborative effort involving a number of people, with Huffington among those devoting many hours to the effort. "Except for writing my column and spending time with my two daughters, I've devoted every waking moment to the shadow conventions," she said.

It's an effort Huffington hopes not to repeat if the shadow events help spur the two major parties to improve their conventions in 2004.

"If they allow some real argument, and especially if they raise the profile of important issues that may not have a financial constituency, maybe we can render ourselves obsolete," she said. ▣

SHAKEOUT CONTINUES AT NEWSPRINT MILLS

Top North American producers buy, sell, and close mills; East and West Coast deinking-recycling mills change hands

BY JIM ROSENBERG

A RECENT BURST OF RATIONALIZATION, CONSOLIDATION, and realignment along core product lines by North America's newsprint producers mirrors similar activity among newspapers, culminating in deals this spring and summer and the likelihood of further activity in coming months.

By fall, North America's biggest newsprint maker will shrink slightly when it sells a mill in Quebec and closes another in Washington, while its closest competitor will grow when it buys a mill in Mississippi.

Meanwhile, employees and outside investors bought a recycled newsprint mill in Oregon, and a division of a large energy company bought another, in New Jersey, from sellers focusing on core businesses.

The East and West Coast sales bring to four the number of financially troubled recycled-newsprint mills that have changed hands in the past year.

At this stage in the ongoing consolidation, said analyst Reid Carter, "I think the big prizes are gone" in North America. The global consolidation has North American suppliers joining overseas ventures and Norske Skog recently acquiring Fletcher Challenge's paper division, with its Canadian newsprint interests. The deal made the Norwegian firm the world's second-largest newsprint producer, with capacity exceeding 5 million metric tons.

Carter, Vancouver-based forest-products analyst for Canada's National Bank Financial, expects the few very large newsprint makers to now "work to buy some of the lower-cost capacity" represented by single-mill companies. Another scenario, he suggested, could have companies effectively swapping assets to focus on core products — pulp, newsprint, higher paper grades.

"At some point, we're going to come up against antitrust concerns ... [but] I don't think we're at that level yet."

— REID CARTER
NATIONAL BANK FINANCIAL

That's just what Bowater Inc. is about to do, and what Abitibi-Consolidated Inc. did a few years ago, said Carter, when it bought Stone Container's Snowflake, Ariz., recycled newsprint mill.

Looking ahead, the Daishowa mill in Quebec City is for sale. Built in the late 1980s, with 390,000-ton annual capacity on two machines, it is "a very good mill [that] needs some effluent treatment still," said Carter, adding that "the asking price is too high right now." Citing four other U.S. and Canadian companies as attractive small producers, he said that, given an expectation of an achievable newsprint price hike by next February and unchanging demand, "the time to sell a newsprint mill is over the next eight months."

Pending regulatory approvals, Bowater, Greenville, S.C., will buy Newsprint South Inc.'s mill, in Grenada, Miss., from GE Capital Structured Finance Group and Newsprint South shareholders for $370 million and assumption of $8.9 million in debt. The mill has a production capacity of 250,000 metric tons a year. (A metric ton weighs a little more than 2,200 pounds.)

In announcing the June 14 agreement, Bowater said the mill's location will allow the company to expand into Southwestern markets (the Newsprint South Sales subsidiary is headquartered in Dallas). In the early 1990s, Newsprint South gave kenaf a boost when it seriously considered using the plant's fiber in its furnish. The fast-growing paper-making alternative to wood was grown by dozens of area farmers, including the chairman of the mill's original parent company.

The Grenada mill will give Bowater nine pulp and paper mills: four each in the United States and Canada, and one in South Korea. Capacity of its existing newsprint mills is 2.9 million metric tons. It also owns a coating operation and three sawmills.

In 1989, when Newsprint South finished building its comparatively low-cost operation, Montreal-based Abitibi-Consolidated Inc. was rebuilding a 25-year-old paper machine at its much older mill in Chandler, Quebec. Five days after Bowater said it will buy the Grenada mill, Abitibi found a buyer for its high-cost Chandler mill, which until six years ago was partly owned by the New York Times Co.

Two days later, it disclosed plans to end two other high-cost operations: a Washington mill and a Quebec paper machine.

Abitibi signed a letter of intent with a consortium comprising SNC-Lavalin Inc., le Fonds de solidarité des travailleurs du Quebec, and Clermont Lévasseur to sell the Chandler mill for $35 million (Canadian) before taxes. The transaction is expected to close in the third quarter.

But the new owners will not put newsprint back into the market. They agreed to convert production to coated free-sheet grades used in glossy magazines, meeting Abitibi's condition that the mill not compete with Abitibi's core grades. Investment costs for the consortium's project are expected to total approximately $420 million.

"They might as well be building a greenfield mill for what they're trying to do," said National Bank Financial's Carter, an ecologist by training who earlier worked as a resource management and investment strategies analyst for Fletcher Challenge. "If I were a member of that pension fund, I wouldn't be very happy about it," he remarked in reference to one of the consortium members.

High-cost mills that would otherwise be closed, he continued, typically rely on government and pension-fund money to survive. Speaking of mills such as Abitibi's in Chandler and West Tacoma, Wash., he said such "orphans" tend to "suck up public capital" and can be "improved to the point where they actually have value again and end up being purchased by a major. [But] somebody else takes the capital risk." Still, he quickly pointed out that Abitibi is not interested in seeing a former property put newsprint back into the market.

Permanently closed last October, the mill produced 140,000 tons on only one of its two machines in 1998, when Abitibi began looking for a buyer.

Just 10 days ago, Abitibi said it will close its 130,000-metric-ton newsprint mill in West Tacoma at year's end and plans to shut down a 50,000-ton value-added paper machine at its Wayagamack mill in Trois-Rivieres, Quebec, at the beginning of 2001.

Abitibi CEO John Weaver said the moves aim to quickly accomplish goals his company announced when it acquired Donohue Inc. this spring — among them, low-cost structure and capacity rationalization. (No. 3 North American newsprint maker Donohue had recently acquired Champion International's two U.S. newsprint mills.)

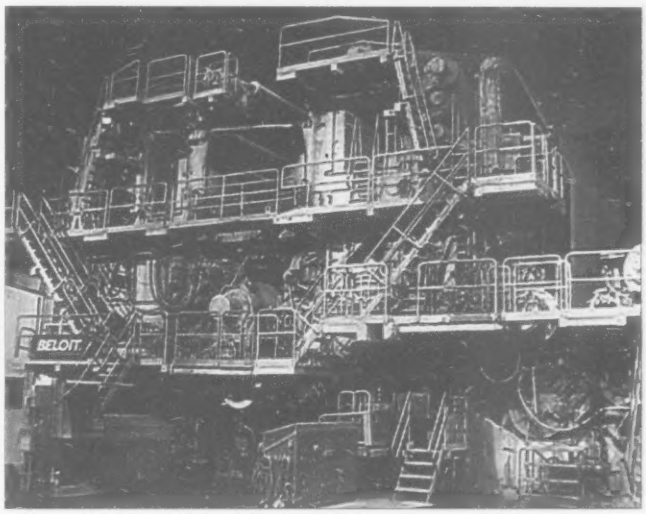
Shuttering West Tacoma, said Weaver, will go "one-third of the way towards the permanent removal of our stated goal of 400,000 tons of high-cost newsprint capacity." The company said the mill represented its "highest-cost newsprint tons."

Though Abitibi continues its auction for the Wayagamack mill, by shutting down its No. 1 machine and exiting low-margin markets, it hopes to enable the mill to streamline costs and focus on producing papers for North America, creating "a viable" mill if no sufficient bid is made.

Because closing costs will be included in accounting for the Donohue acquisition, Abitibi said it expects no one-time charges to earnings.

To repay bridge funding used to buy Donohue and to reduce other debt, Abitibi priced, in the United States, an offering of $450 million of 8.30% notes due in 2005, $500 million of 8.55% notes due in 2010, and $450 million of 8.85% debentures due in 2030.

Rated BBB- by Standard & Poor's and Baa3 by Moody's Investors Service, the debentures were issued under a $1.4-billion shelf registration effective July 13. Carter called the bonds neither "inexpensive" nor "necessarily out of line," given the industry's history in issuing debt. "Lots of companies have debt more expensive than Abitibi's current bonds," he said. And while highly leveraged, he said, Abitibi has "a very strong newsprint market now, and looking forward, I would expect [it to last] at least through 2001." Moreover, said Carter, if, as expected, the Canadian dollar strengthens against the U.S. dollar (in which the debt is denominated), it "will provide some additional relief to the cost of that debt."



Whirled wide web: Paper machine at Newsprint South mill in Grenada, Miss.

Abitibi owns or co-owns 29 paper mills in North America, the United Kingdom, and Asia; 22 sawmills; two remanufacturing facilities; and a market pulp mill. In newsprint alone, it sells 6.4 million metric tons annually in almost 100 countries.

Wondering "how big will Abitibi and Bowater be allowed to get?" Carter said, "At some point, we're going to come up against antitrust concerns ... [but] I don't think we're at that level yet." Still, after a few very profitable years for producers or punishing years for publishers, he cautioned, the matter may reach "a higher awareness."

A day before Newsprint South's sale, Media General Inc., Richmond, Va., said it will sell its Garden State Paper Co. (GSP) subsidiary to an affiliate of Houston-based Enron North America Corp. for $72 million. Expected to close by fall, the transaction includes a multiyear, fixed-price paper buy. Media General will take an after-tax charge of approximately $14 million (included in revised second-quarter results).

A huge natural gas and electricity supplier, Enron said last year that it planned to sell newsprint. Its Enron Capital & Trade Resources Corp. already arranges newsprint-price swaps as a financial hedge for producers and printers alike.

Annually producing 242,000 short tons of 100% recycled newsprint at its Garfield, N.J., mill, GSP (with offices in nearby Elmwood Park) employs approximately 290. The business includes two recovered-newspaper recycling centers built in 1989. The mill generates part of the electricity it uses by burning residual ink and fiber, which it once had to pay a waste hauler to remove and dump.

Media General put GSP on the block 10 years ago, when its work force numbered 435 and its value was estimated at $200 million (though no asking price was announced). At the time, prices remained low even as demand for recycled newsprint soared, keeping the mill operating at 100% capacity in the midst of newspapers' worst recession in 50 years.

The company reported to shareholders that last year's 15% drop in the average realized selling price per ton and 5% lower sales volume reduced revenue by more than $15 million at the newsprint division, which sustained an operating loss of $13.3 million, compared with profit of $12.1 million in 1998. Media General also cited production problems at GSP that it believes it has fixed.

Media General also sold a recycling mill in Pomona, Calif., in 1989 and its 49% stake in a similar mill in Mexico in 1995. Both mills were established using deinking technology developed by GSP.

Acquired by Media General along with the defunct Newark Evening News, GSP's plant was built in 1961 under News Publisher Richard B. Scudder, who spent 11 years developing a newspaper-deinking process.

Scudder was a Media General shareholder and chairman of GSP until what he described in a 1995 lawsuit as his wrongful termination. Citing age discrimination and retaliation for opposing Media General's alleged interference in his and his partner William Dean Singleton's Denver Post, Scudder claimed Media General breached a lifetime-employment agreement After the case moved from state to federal district court, which found for Media General, the 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Philadelphia "heard an appeal and affirmed the decision of the district court," said Scudder's lawyer, Frederick W. Rose.

After having invested $83 million in Singleton's and Scudder's MediaNews Group, Media General sold its interest to the partners for $63 million and a 40% stake in the Denver Post — reduced a year ago to 20%.

The announcement follows Media General's sale of its cable-TV division, expansion of its newspaper and TV holdings, and purchase of $170 million worth of its stock.

Media General Chairman and CEO J. Stewart Bryan III said his company "has further narrowed its focus to providing news, information, and entertainment principally to the Southeast," where it owns more than 20 dailies of all sizes.

Media General will maintain its one-third interest in SP Newsprint Co. (co-owned by Cox Enterprises Inc. and Knight Ridder), which operates a mill in Georgia (started with GSP technology) and another in Oregon. SP provides Media General with a "strategic hedge against the vagaries of newsprint pricing," said Bryan.

The mill in Newberg, Ore., that SP acquired last year from Smurfit Stone Container Corp. had a $3.4-million loss during the part of the year it was owned by SP, which nevertheless provided Media General with income of $6.6 million thanks to efficient production and higher sales.

Just weeks before agreement was reached to sell GSP, Smurfit's second newsprint mill in Oregon was sold. (Both mills once belonged to Times Mirror Co., and Smurfit also eventually owned the former Media General mill in Pomona, Calif.)

KPS Special Situations Fund L.P. has a 60% interest in the Oregon City mill, where employees (including unionized hourly workers, who are now represented on the board of directors) acquired the remaining shares in exchange for pay and benefit reductions to help cut operating costs.

Operating as the Blue Heron Paper Co., the 200,000-ton-per-year, three-machine mill will continue making recycled newsprint, as well as other groundwood and recycled-fiber products.

Garden State Paper Superintendent Timothy Brumley watches the work of the recycled newsprint mill's No. 1 paper machine.

A 2-year-old private equity fund that invests in restructurings, turnarounds, and other "special situations," often in cooperation with employee groups, New York-based KPS says it has restructured dozens of manufacturers and service companies.

Yet another recycled newsprint mill, FSC Paper, Alsip, Ill., also was recently sold — out of bankruptcy — to a U.S. affiliate of a Finnish company (E&P, July 3, p. 30). FSC also has its roots in GSP: It began as a partnership of Scudder and former Chicago Sun-Times owner Field Enterprises Inc.

There is nothing inherently uneconomical about making recycled newsprint, said National Bank Financial's Carter, who blamed recycling mills' woes on high costs and some environmental-compliance issues. He said that, in general, most are older, with smaller, slower machines, are not always well maintained, and use wash deinking rather than newer flotation. Where screening and deinking are poor, he added, mills must pay more to get higher-quality old newspapers and magazines.

In contrast to high-cost, often highly leveraged, stand-alone recycling operations, Carter continued, big producers that own deinking-recycling operations "tend to maintain them better." With "broader balance sheets" and "mills right across the cost spectrum," he said, such companies "generally are able to create cash."

He concluded: "If you account for 34% of North American newsprint production, prices aren't likely to go much below your cash cost, because you're helping set price" — unlike one-mill companies that "don't have any market clout at all." Unable to provide the supply guarantees that major publishers want, such smaller businesses often trade in the spot market, where during periods of weak demand, prices can fall so steeply "that it's killing," he said.

GSP's Scudder may have succeeded, but he wasn't the first to deink and repulp newspapers. Two Canadian chemists' work led to a newsprint recycling mill in Minnesota in 1933.

An executive who was to license the patented process to mills told E&P at the time that it meant U.S. publishers could stop worrying about a Canadian newsprint monopoly, as the principal fiber source changed from wood to old paper, and that mills would be able to locate near cities, which generate most of the waste paper.

But 67 years later, the world's media capital — with millions of readers of countless newspapers — has no such plant. Just 10 days ago, the latest of several plans to recycle newsprint in New York was abandoned after six years of effort: Bronx Community Paper Co.'s deinking-papermaking plant will not be built, according to developer Morse Diesel International.

Ready availability of adequate city and state financial assistance, land, water, recovered newspapers, and interested publishers made the location attractive.

But Morse Diesel officials told The New York Times that rising interest rates on financing the $400-million project would have pushed its cost to $700 million.

Like earlier efforts, the facility was to have occupied part of a big rail yard abandoned almost 20 years ago (E&P, Nov. 15, 1997, p. 34). Today, a portion of that property is home to the New York Post's new production plant. ▣

MTV's BUZZWORTHY

Buzzworthy songs are usually by new, up-and-coming artists who MTV believes have special potential. Of the videos designated as Buzzworthy, the vast majority have been certified gold or platinum.

Week of 7/24/00

Artist/Group: Travis
Song/Video: "Why Does It Always Rain On Me"
Director: John Hardwick

The latest Brit-Pop sensation coming from the same school as past heroes Oasis, Radiohead and the Verve, Travis might not be the most original band on the planet, but their songs definitely have a modest charm to them.

Artist/Group: Papa Roach
Song/Video: "Last Resort"
Director: Marcos Siega

Don't look now, but the third wave of funk/rock/rap bands that began as far back as Faith No More in the late 80s has arrived. High school and younger-aged college crowds will love 'em, but how long their shelf-life will be remains to be seen.

Oliver Platt: Straight out of j-school?

'Deadline' pressure

PLATT: PROTESS TOO MUCH?

SO HOW MUCH DOES THE PILOT OF the upcoming NBC newspaper drama "Deadline" — a show about a tabloid reporter who uses journalism grad students in his investigations — resemble the true-life adventures of Northwestern University Professor David Protess? Let him count the ways.

"It's the Anthony Porter case," Protess says flatly about the series' pilot episode. "You have two African-American men who are on Death Row with the clock ticking and our hero involves students in a graduate journalism class — exactly as we did. The students recreate the crime scene — exactly as we did. They become convinced that the state has convicted the wrong man — exactly as we did. Our hero develops evidence implicating other men in the crime — exactly as we did," says Protess, who obtained a script for the pilot from NBC, but has not seen a completed episode. The weekly series makes its debut Oct. 2.

Protess: From Death Row to prime time?

And in another apparent case of art imitating life, Protess says the script of the pilot (previewed in E&P two weeks ago) has the freed men hug the journalist outside the doors of a prison. When real-life inmate

THE BEST — AND REST — OF THE PRESS

"A well-fed press corps, both in quantity and quality, is a happy press corps."

SENATORIAL COURTESY

JOHN SPINK, ATLANTA JOURNAL-CONSTITUTION, JULY 21

IT WAS THE CHANGING OF THE GUARD, IN THIS CASE THE Georgia State Patrol, as the body of U.S. Sen. Paul Coverdell, R-Ga., lay in state at the Capitol Rotunda in Atlanta. Known as a refreshingly humble and quiet politician, Coverdell, 61, died following a massive stroke. A 15-year-old girl who filed by the casket said simply, "It's sad when one of the good guys is gone." ▣

Porter was released after 16 years of prison in 1999, he lifted the professor in a joyful bear hug.

With all those similarities, Protess told E&P he's worried people will think he is the lead character, portrayed by actor Oliver Pratt as an oft-divorced hard-drinker who flouts journalism ethics and flirts with his female students.

But "Deadline" Producer Dick Wolf told TV writers earlier this month that while Protess' work is "praiseworthy," the character is "decidedly not based on David Protess. There is one episode that may remind you of Chicago, but the reality is that ... every major journalism school in the country depends on reporters to teach courses."

Protess, who says his First Amendment beliefs prevent him from ever suing, claims all he wants from NBC are ads in The New York Times, E&P, the Columbia Journalism Review, and legal journals that make it clear he has nothing to do with the TV series. "As long as people don't think any of this pertains to me," Protess says, "I'm fine with the show. TV does this sort of crap all the time."

THE TALK OF THE TOWN

KEARNEY (NEB.) HUB

When Jerry Schram wants to read the Kearney (Neb.) Hub, all he has to do is pick up the phone. Schram and other visually impaired residents of Kearney can now gain access to the latest news, opinion pieces, obituaries, and columns through an audiotext service called "Talking Hub," which is provided by the local paper with the help of more than two dozen volunteers. "What I like about the service is that it lets me read the Hub without having to catch someone to read it for me," says Schram.

The service was offered in response to requests to the Hub's reader advisory board. One member of the board, who drove for a visually impaired woman in her neighborhood, noted that the woman "missed the independence of reading the paper." So with the sponsorship of the Kearney Eye Institute, the "Talking Hub" was born.

Vicki Medley, volunteer, reads articles into the "Hub" so that others may "read" along.

Carol Staab, marketing assistant for the Hub, points out that the "Talking Hub" is unique when compared to other audiotext services because it features the human voices of volunteers, and "not a computer." She says this feature is the one most appreciated by the system's users, who log about 130 calls a week.

It has also changed the way the Hub views itself as a member of the community. "We realized that we can do more than just deliver the news," Staab explains.

Airport incident raises question

PAIR SEPARATED AT BIRTH?

After Helen Thomas spoke at a July 18 fund-raiser for the LaFarge Lifelong Learning Institute, the grateful senior citizen center presented the White House correspondent with a typical Milwaukee gift: Sausages from Usinger's with a big block of cheese shaped like the state of Wisconsin.

But the gift pack caused some anxious moments when Thomas, 79, tried to get it through security later that night at Mitchell International Airport. Turns out there was a knife in the gift box. Marion Hook, the LaFarge executive director, left the knife with the guards, and after seeing Thomas off to Washington, returned to thank the security people for how they handled the incident. "I said to the X-ray technician, 'Do you know who that was?'" Hook reported. "She said, 'I didn't know then, but I do now — that was Madeline Albright!'"

ADVERTORIALS: AN UNHOLY MARRIAGE

Apparent alliance of church and state puts credibility on the line

NOT TOO MANY YEARS AGO, NEWS WAS NEWS, ADS were ads, and the two met only where the news hole ended and the ad stack began.

Our journalism-school professors and newsroom mentors preached the importance of separating news and ads. They told us that our credibility was on the line, that advertising should never influence or mix with news, that readers had to be able to distinguish between unbiased information and paid content.

Most of us clung to that precept the same way we hung onto our favorite pica poles. Few things were black and white in this business, but the distinction between news and ads was and forever would be.

Then came advertorials.

The name itself should have been a clue that we were headed for trouble. It's a godawful, made-up word, and good journalists cringe at the thought of bastardizing the language for a trend. Moreover, the word brings advertising and editorial together in an unholy alliance that should have made the ink in our veins boil.

BY SCOTT ANGUS

But, like them or not, advertorials are here, and they aren't likely to go away soon.

In some ways, distasteful as it is to admit, they have helped newsrooms. Many advertorial topics are marginally newsworthy, at best, and taking or keeping them out of the newsroom allows reporters and editors to spend more time on legitimate topics. After all, wouldn't we rather throw our limited resources at the latest city hall scandal or an in-depth series on teen pregnancy than a special section on the merits and methods of buying "pre-owned" automobiles?

More important for newspapers — or their bottom lines, at least — is that advertorials make money. Many advertisers like to exert control over a page's or a section's content from top to bottom, cover to cover. They like to write their own copy for advertorial stories or at least know that their interests will be protected. They are more likely to advertise on such pages or in such sections because they believe their messages will be unfettered.

So given advertorials' prevalence, their benefits to newsrooms, and the likelihood that they'll be around for a while, what's a principled journalist to do? Should we simply turn our backs on them and turn our attention to the real news being covered by our newsrooms?

While that would be the easiest approach, it wouldn't be the wisest. The line between news and ads may have blurred, but editorial and advertising are still on opposite sides. We must ensure that the line is not blatantly crossed, and we must do what we can to help readers recognize the difference between the two.

Clearly, "Paid Advertising" labels are important elements in that effort, as they have been for years. They should grace every page of an advertorial in a position and type size prominent enough to make them obvious to even the most casual scanner.

Headline and text fonts for advertorials should be significantly different than those used for news. Sans-serif body fonts, in particular, set advertising copy apart from news stories. Column widths, photo positioning, and other elements can be used to further separate advertorials from the formats of news pages.

Finally, many papers have taken to running disclaimers on the fronts of their advertorial sections. They state clearly and directly that the content is paid advertising and that the editorial side was not involved in producing the sections. Some disclaimers even provide advertising-department phone numbers for readers with questions, concerns, or complaints. That's a fine idea in the minds of editors who have fielded complaints or requests for corrections of information in advertorials.

No one with a sense of what really matters in our business can deny the importance of a distinction between news and advertising. More and more, it seems, advertorial sections and pages are being designed to fool readers, to make them think that the content isn't bought and paid for, that it has the value of fair and objective news coverage. It's a disturbing trend, and all of us should be vigilant in questioning or opposing ad pages and sections that come anywhere close to crossing the line.

After all, that line guards our credibility, and we must do all that we can to protect what is left of it. ▣

we can save you both!

ProductionManagerPro is the greatest time and money saver yet, resulting in fewer "make goods", fewer missed deadlines, and helping create a more efficient ad production workflow.

As you build an ad (in QuarkXPress®, Multi-Ad Creator®, or Adobe InDesign®) ProductionManagerPro keeps track of all the elements of an ad — photos, logos, fonts — and gathers them together in an easy to find location.

ProductionManagerPro will not only store all your ad files, it will help you search through them too. You can make queries as general as "all ads for tomorrow's paper," or as specific as "all ads assigned to an ad taker with the status of 'needs correction.'"

With fewer costly errors you will save time and money.

You've danced with us,
romanced with us,
been entranced with us,
even split your pants with us.
Now, perchance, your knowledge of comics will allow you to ADVANCE with us!

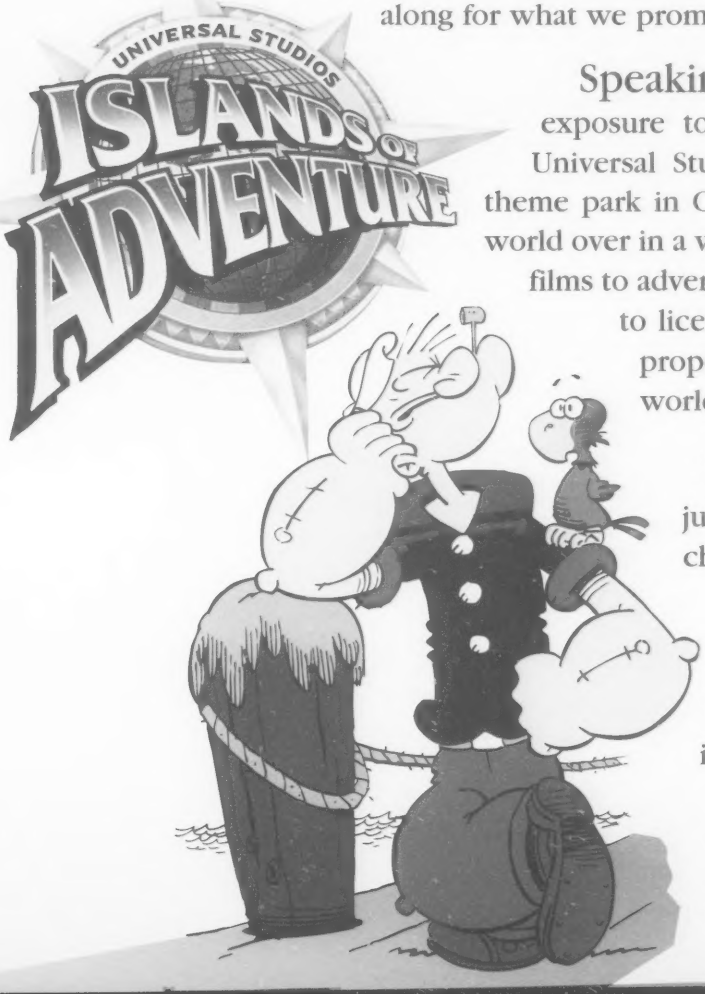
For as long as we can remember, we've been a special part of each other's existence. Whenever we've acquired a new feature, or introduced a new comic strip, or discovered a promising new talent, you were the first to know of and to share our excitement. Our desire to provide you and your readers with the very best has remained constant throughout our history together. Your commitment to accept nothing but the best has always challenged us in the most positive way.

Editors and readers both rely on King Features to provide up-to-the-minute excitement as well as long-lasting friendships. Blondie, Beetle Bailey, Hägar the Horrible and Hi and Lois are old friends in an ever-changing world, while Mutts, Zits, Baby Blues, Rhymes with Orange and Six Chix — among others — have created their own niche in today's fast-paced society. Political cartoons, puzzles and columns continue to challenge us. Lifestyle columns help sort out our hectic lives and schedules.

We're confident we can meet the challenges presented by today's ever-changing, ever-expanding Internet, without sacrificing any of the elements that make us unique. And we want you to come along for what we promise will be an exciting ride.



Speaking of rides, our characters enjoy exposure to tens of thousands of visitors at Universal Studios' new Islands of Adventure™ theme park in Orlando, Fla., and are promoted the world over in a variety of media. From television and films to advertising and public-service campaigns to licensed character merchandise, King's properties are recognized and beloved worldwide.

We envision a future filled with just the right blend of constancy and change — a future in which you and your readers will be an integral part. As the brightest spot in your newspaper's pages — in print or online— we want you to include King Features

QUESTION 5:

All of this is now available through King Features and Gazette Communications Inc. – a powerful alliance that combines more than 200 years of newspaper industry experience and state-of-the-art printing technology!

King is the world's leading newspaper syndicate, with roots dating back to the 1890s and the very first color comic, The Yellow Kid. King has produced Sunday color comic sections for more than 60 years, and now serves nearly 150 newspapers.

Gazette Communications Inc. is one of America's most highly respected independent newspapers, publishing under the same family ownership for 117 years. In addition to a rich history of editorial integrity, Gazette Communications also has won recognition for being in the forefront of publishing technology.

In 1999, Gazette Communications became the first U.S. newspaper to publish on new shaftless 21-inch, Goss Universal 70 presses. This new, fully redundant press system has significant efficiencies in make-ready and color controls.

King Features and Gazette Communications are now passing on these productivity gains to their customer newspapers – in the form of quality Sunday color comic printing at lower costs!

King Features GREAT AMERICAN COMICS TRIVIA CONTEST

Test Your Knowledge of Comics History and

WIN!!!

GRAND PRIZE: A FREE trip for a family of four to Universal Studios Islands of Adventure™, the exciting new theme park in Orlando, Fla., for your newspaper to use as a promotional giveaway!

FIRST PRIZE: Choose one of King Features' popular comics or text features and run it FREE – for 30 days!

SECOND PRIZE: A signed and numbered, limited-edition hardcover book, "Mutts: Sundays," the first anthology of "Mutts" full-color Sunday comic strips. By Patrick McDonnell, winner of the 1999 National Cartoonists Society's Reuben Award for Best Cartoonist of the Year!

This year, in our Editor & Publisher Syndicate Directory insert (July 29, 2000), we've included eight trivia questions. Answer them correctly on the Official Entry Form below and, if you win our drawing, we'll give your newspaper the Grand Prize to use as part of a circulation-building consumer promotion, a community-based charity fundraiser or in any creative way that enhances your newspaper's image in your local market! Ten First Prize and 10 Second Prize winners will also be chosen in a random drawing. Turn the page for the Official Contest Rules.

King Features GREAT AMERICAN COMICS TRIVIA CONTEST

King Features GREAT AMERICAN COMICS TRIVIA CONTEST

Official Contest Rules

NO PURCHASE NECESSARY. NO SUBMISSION TO SALES PRESENTATION REQUIRED.
Sweepstakes runs from 9:00 a.m. (ET), July 29, 2000 through 5 p.m. (ET) Oct. 27, 2000.

1) How to get an Official Entry Form: (1) On the Internet, visit the news/press section of the King Features Web site at www.kingfeatures.com and e-mail your request for the Official Entry Form to King Features; or by calling King Features Advertising & Public Relations Department at 1-800-526-5464 or direct at 1-212-455-4000. (2) Who may enter: This contest is a trade promotion only and is open to legal United States residents, including Alaska and Hawaii, who are 18 or older, and employed by a daily newspaper in the United States. King Features reserves the right to verify newspaper employment status of eligible entrants. To enter, answer all eight trivia questions and mail your Official Entry Form to King Features Great American Comics Trivia Contest, King Features Syndicate, 235 East 45th Street, New York, NY 10017, to be received no later than Oct. 27, 2000. King Features is not responsible for late, lost or illegible entries. (3) Winning: Winning entries will be chosen by Nov. 10, 2000, by random drawing. Only entries with eight correctly answered questions will be eligible to win. King Features will attempt to notify all verified winners by phone on or about Nov. 15, 2000. Entrants agree to be bound by the official rules. Both the winning newspaper employee and an officer of the winner's newspaper must sign and return an Affidavit of Eligibliity/Release granting King Features the right to use the name of the newspaper as well as the winning newspaper employee's name and photograph, without compensation, for publicity purposes, and releasing King Features from any liability arising from the contest and acceptance and use of the prizes, or an alternative winner will be chosen. (4) Prizes: (a) Grand Prize: A 3-day/2-night trip for a family of four to Universal Studios Islands of Adventure™ theme park in Orlando, Fla. The Grand Prize Trip is to be used by the winning newspaper as part of a circulation-building consumer promotion, a community-based charity fundraiser or, subject to approval by King Features Syndicate, in any creative promotion that enhances the newspaper's image in its local market. The trip includes round-trip coach airfare from the U.S. airport nearest winner's home to Orlando, Fla., double-occupancy hotel accomodations, ground transportation and four two-day theme park entrance tickets. (Approx. Retail Value: $4,200) All meals, gratuities, service charges, taxes or other expenses not specified are the responsibility of the consumer who wins the trip when the newspaper runs its own promotion as outlined above. King Features Syndicate will handle all travel arrangements. Trip must be completed by November 15, 2001. (b) 10 First Prizes: 30-day free trial of one of King Features Syndicate's comics or text features (Approx. Individual Retail Value: Dependent upon feature selected.) The selected feature is to be used in the winning newspaper only. (c) 10 Second Prizes: 10 signed and numbered, limited-edition hardcover books, "Mutts: Sundays," the first anthology of "Mutts" full-color Sunday comic strips by Patrick McDonnell. (Approx. Individual Retail Value: $100). Prizes may not be cashed or exchanged. King Features reserves the right to substitute a product of equal or greater value. (5) For winners' names: Send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to King Features Great American Comics Trivia Contest, King Features Syndicate, 235 East 45th Street, New York, NY 10017 or visit the King Features Web site after Nov. 15, 2000 at www.kingfeatures.com. (6) Odds of winning: Dependent upon the number of entries received.

New from The New York Times Syndicate

Esther Dyson
Release 3.0
"The success of any new Microsofts will depend on how successful they are at embodying the vision, energy and drive of their founder, rather than simply carrying out his commands."

Michael Kinsley
Slate
"Every political system, even democracy, is about forcing people to do things they don't want to do."

Harvard Business School Publishing
How to create, lead and transform a business, in a weekly selection of articles from the Harvard Business Review and other periodicals of Harvard Business School Publishing.

Medical News Today
Breaking news in health and medicine, in five articles per day, mainly from HealthScout, the highly respected, physician-vetted news service.

Martha Stewart
askMartha Weddings
"A monogram is a festive and personal addition to a cake, whether it's on its own or combined with other decorative details."

Jane Rinzler Buckingham
NextGen
"Fads are like crushes. They burn fast and hot but die quickly and often leave a bitter taste."

Michelin on Travel
Destinations for the passionate traveler, with recommendations of where to go, eat and stay, from the most trusted name in travel.

TheStreet.com
Market trends and analysis from James J. Cramer, Herb Greenberg, Adam Lashinsky, Dagen McDowell.

Randy Cohen
Everyday Ethics
"The restaurant is free to pollute the audio environment any way it likes. Because something is unpleasant doesn't mean it is unethical."

Joel Brown
TV Tonight
"The WB debuts yet another all-teen-agers, all-the-time series tonight, this one set at a snooty but not otherwise realistic New England prep school."

Popular Mechanics
How things work, from hotshot digital cameras to antimissile systems, in four articles per week, with photos and diagrams.

E-Commerce News Service
The frontier of all aspects of e-commerce, consumer and business-to-business, worldwide, in two articles per week from The New York Times special e-commerce sections.

The New York Times NEWS SERVICE

David Ryan/Boston Globe

Worldwide, world-class, a report from the newspaper by which every other newspaper measures itself. With contributions from 13 partner news organizations. Daily, more than 300 articles, for all sections, edited and budgeted for maximum accessibility (including The Times' Early Front Page). Four levels of service, affordable for every paper.

Jack Kurtz/The Arizona Republic

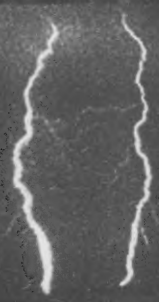
Photojournalism that captures and interprets the news, from photographers with special access and resources: 25 news and feature photos daily, on every topic, at home and abroad, from The Times and the News Service partners.



The New York Times Graphics Service

Graphics as journalism, adding another level of detail and analysis to articles. Our forte: quick-response graphics to illustrate breaking news. About 10 informational and story-specific graphics daily: charts, diagrams, illustrations, maps and timelines.

With The New York Times commentary columnists*

Gail Collins
"If people will tune in to 'Who Wants to Be a Millionaire' reruns, perhaps they really will be open to 'Bush, the Next Generation.'"

Paul Krugman
"If middle-class Americans had any realistic sense of how rich the rich really are, policy moves that cater specifically to the wealthy ... would face a much rougher ride."

Maureen Dowd
Pulitzer Prize
"And that's the problem with this race. One guy says a lot but never says anything. The other guy doesn't say a lot and never says anything."

Anthony Lewis
Pulitzer Prize (twice)
"The lives of American soldiers are not at risk in Colombia – yet. But in other respects the parallels between this adventure and Vietnam are spooky."

Thomas L. Friedman
Pulitzer Prize (twice)
"If southern Lebanon hadn't existed, the Arabs and Israelis would have had to rent Cyprus for the same purposes."

Frank Rich
"It's the paradox of our historical moment that even as the clamor grows to suppress offensive speech, we are speeding into the first century in which doing so may be impossible."

Bob Herbert
"Many of the rights and liberties that Americans have come to take for granted over the past few decades are now in the cross-hairs and well within range of the right-wing extremists."

William Safire
Pulitzer Prize
"The best national missile defense requires a bold rhetorical offense."

David Broder

Richard Cohen

E. J. Dionne Jr.

Ellen Goodman

Jim Hoagland

Michael Kelly

David Broder No one covers national affairs like David Broder. He interviews voters, presidents, grass-roots activists and insiders to provide valuable perspective into politics and government. Pulitzer winner. Twice weekly.

Richard Cohen A stylish writer who leans to the left, Cohen takes on front-page issues with vigorous skepticism, wit and a common sense that appeals to readers everywhere. Twice weekly.

E. J. Dionne Jr. An accomplished political reporter whose evenhanded approach leads to greater understanding of any issue. Dionne is at his best exploring the reasons behind political developments and voter sentiments. Twice weekly.

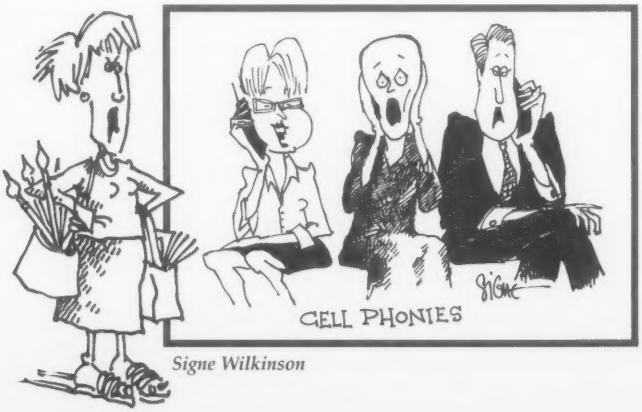
Ellen Goodman An astonishing writer capable of bringing a deft personal touch to any issue, public or private. Humanity, compassion and thorough reporting are hallmarks of Goodman's columns. Associate editor of The Boston Globe. Pulitzer winner. Twice weekly.

Jim Hoagland With his grasp of global politics and economics, and connections to high-level officials worldwide, Hoagland offers insights that standard international coverage cannot provide. Two-time Pulitzer winner, for foreign reporting and commentary. Twice weekly.

Michael Kelly Sharp, passionate, entertaining and invigorating, Kelly skewers political wrongdoers with his razor wit. He is solidly conservative but will take on offenders across the political spectrum. Editor in chief of National Journal. Once a week.

Charles Krauthammer An incisive thinker who breathes new life into tired debates, offering clear and compelling arguments that everyone else overlooks. Krauthammer is an influential voice in international affairs and U.S. politics. Pulitzer winner. Once a week.

Geneva Overholser As a former newspaper editor and ombudsman, Overholser knows the issues that connect with readers. On topics both political and personal she informs and enlightens. Twice weekly.



Signe Wilkinson

The Washington Post
WRITERS GROUP

Neal Peirce Sprawl, urban renewal and regional economics are hot-button issues for the next decade, and Peirce is on top of them all. He is months ahead of the media pack in spotting local innovations with national significance. Once a week.

William Raspberry Discussing race, education, justice or other topics, Raspberry inspires readers to introspection while offering common-sense solutions to complex social problems. Pulitzer winner. Twice weekly.

Robert J. Samuelson Regarded as one of the best economic reporters in the business. Samuelson's solid, logical progressions are clarion calls in today's convoluted economic, social and political debates. Once a week.

George F. Will The nation's leading conservative thinker. Will's essential commentaries on politics, law and social character always challenge and captivate readers everywhere. Pulitzer winner. Twice weekly.

Editorial Cartoonists

Nick Anderson Classic caricatures, inventive visuals and cutting satire make Anderson a valuable addition to any editorial page. Chief editorial cartoonist of the Louisville Courier-Journal. Four cartoons a week.

Signe Wilkinson An accomplished cartoonist whose unique style and famous irreverence have taken her to the top of her field. Editorial cartoonist of The Philadelphia Daily News. Pulitzer winner. Four cartoons a week.

Newsweek

Each week the Newsweek News Service provides 25-30 stories and columns from the best newsweekly in the business. Newsweek's incisive coverage of business, politics, religion, society, sports, world affairs and the arts focuses on the human side of every story. The magazine's cover articles, interviews, exposés and features are transmitted to subscribers each Sunday – before the magazine hits the newsstands. With the Newsweek News Service in the mix, any publication becomes much more comprehensive.

World News With reporting and analysis from correspondents based in 22 bureaus around the globe, Newsweek covers evolving social issues and breaking international events with unmatched breadth and depth.

Society/The Arts/Science The Newsweek staff charts everything from cultural revolutions to medical breakthroughs with a focus on the human element of each story.

U.S. Political and National Affairs Newsweek's political coverage, with its "dream team" of world-famous writers, has been voted Best in the Business by readers of the American Journalism Review.

Focus On These in-depth packages are filled with practical advice, the latest news and commentary from the experts. Focus On Technology, Focus On Your Money, Focus On Your Health, Focus On Your Family and Focus On Travel appear periodically throughout the year.

Standing Features Every week, look for:

Periscope: A collection of hot and timely tidbits often exclusive to Newsweek.

Cyberscope: Cutting-edge cyber-tips plus Web-site and game reviews to keep readers up-to-date.

Newsmakers: A quick look at what's up with both the famous and the infamous.

Interviews: Exclusive interviews with leaders, newsmakers and celebrities from around the world.

Commentary Newsweek columnists, world leaders and renowned experts contribute original and exclusive commentary on the hot topics of the day. Readers contribute their personal stories in the popular "My Turn" series.

"Pickles"

Pickles by Brian Crane It's no small feat to stay married to the same person for more than 50 years. Earl and Opal Pickles have done this gracefully with the help of family, friends and pets who keep their lives full of love and laughter, and a good dose of sarcasm. Daily and Sunday strip.

PC and Pixel by Thach Bui and Geoff Johnson The pace of the Internet and new technologies can be daunting for even the most connected computer geeks. But PC Odata and his furry feline Pixel just keep on surfin' through this wired world of ours. Daily and Sunday strip.

"PC and Pixel"

Red and Rover by Brian Basset A retro-feel strip about the unconditional love between a boy and his dog. It takes readers back to a simpler time where loyalty is unquestioned and friendship is forever. "Red and Rover" wins praise from boomers, their parents and kids. Daily and Sunday strip.

That's Life by Mike Twohy Life happens. Thankfully, when it does, Mike Twohy gives us another way of looking at things. This quick-witted, wry and intelligent comic about modern society is appreciated by all of us who must live life on life's terms. Daily in panel format and Sunday strip.

Features

"Cheap Thrills Cuisine"

Cheap Thrills Cuisine by Bill Lombardo and Thach Bui Tasty recipes in comic-strip form, whipped up by Chef Peppi – the alter-ego of chef Lombardo and cartoonist Bui. Each recipe is quick and easy for the novice cook and delicious enough to please the more experienced chef. In color or black-and-white. Once a week.

Bill Lombardo and Thach Bui

The Family Filmgoer by Jane Horwitz Movie reviews with a focus on family. Horwitz recommends what's appropriate for kids, teens and adults, giving parents an invaluable tool when planning trips to the theater. Includes "Beyond the Ratings Game," a chart breaking down the ratings of 10 to 12 current releases. Once a week.

Jane Horwitz

Tom Shales Renowned for his merciless and hilarious thrashings of pathetic programming, Shales keeps readers entertained and TV executives nervous. Pulitzer winner. Twice weekly, plus specials on major televised events.

Tell Me About It by Carolyn Hax It turns out that teen-agers and 20-somethings don't know everything – and they need Carolyn to help them out. Hax dispenses advice with attitude, all the while sticking to her refreshingly grounded set of values. Twice weekly, with illustrations by Nick Galifianakis.

Carolyn Hax

Washington Post Book World With up to 20 reviews and features each week plus guest essays from well-known authors, Book World offers comprehensive literary coverage. Featuring Pulitzer winners Jonathan Yardley and Michael Dirda. Two transmissions a week – the Sunday tab and weekday reviews.

Washington Post Magazine Crossword Puzzle Though known for its humor and clever clues, the Post Magazine crossword also challenges even the most astute puzzle-solvers. Featuring some of the nation's top constructors. Once a week.

In addition to AP and snail mail delivery of features, United Media can help you reduce pre-press costs with digital delivery options. Our Web site, www.featurebank.com*, allows clients to access features 24 hours a day using Netscape, Internet Explorer or America Online's browser. As with our Bulletin Board Service (BBS), FeatureBank allows you to drag and drop features directly into your computer. And our TurboMail system offers e-mail delivery of features sent directly to your e-mail address as attachments, eliminating the need for scanning and retyping.*

To try any of these digital methods of delivery, please contact UM's customer service department at 800-221-4816 or 212-293-8500.

LA-TWP

100+ standing features

"A well-fitted shower cap, not too small, not too big; an extra toothbrush and tube of toothpaste; a small bottle of mouthwash; a nice big bathrobe; hypoallergenic, non-perfumed soaps; shampoo and conditioner; and a makeup area with good lighting." These are some of the things Martha Stewart likes to find in hotel bathrooms.

Others would say her list is too meager by half. My friend Linda Yellin wants bath salts; my globe-trotting sister likes electric towel warmers; and for the Roman Empress Poppaea (as played by Claudette Colbert in the 1932 movie "The Sign of the Cross"), nothing less than a tub full of asses' milk would do.

Few of us have towel warmers at home, but when we're away such amenities can be ours, if only for a few days — which may be why women tend to brighten at the mere mention of hotel bathrooms. To most men, the baths in hotels are functional places where you shower and shave. But to women, the best of the lot are marvelous clean slates someone else tidies up, seductively decorated and full of delightful doodads you're expected to take away.

At the budget end of the spectrum, you're still likely to find a prefab tub with a frumpy rubber mat, thin towels and miniature bottles of generic shampoo not worth pocketing. But if you spend more — and once in her life every woman should, I think — the baths in hotels become the stuff of fantasy, pleasure palaces where you waste entire afternoons primping while others see the sights.

Los Angeles interior designer April Greiman loves above all the bathrooms at the Tawaraya Ryokan in Kyoto, with their own private gardens. Stewart thinks the villas at the Bellagio Hotel in Las Vegas have the best-outfitted baths. Janet Greer, president of Designers II, a firm headquartered in Atlanta that has created bathrooms for Hilton and Sheraton, thrills at the memory of a bathing chamber at the Amanpuri hotel in Thailand. It had an oval tub made of teak overlooking the Andaman Sea.

My traditionalist sister likes the style and accoutrements of the Park Lane Sheraton in London. Grace Leo-Andrieu, a luxury hotel consultant based in Paris, recalls honeymooning in a suite at The Regent Hong Kong hotel, where picture windows transformed the tub into a front row seat on the city's stunning skyline.

My pal Linda, who lives in New York, would come back to California in a split second to sink into a tub-for-two at Shutters on the Beach in Santa Monica. And I have fond memories of the bath at the little Pringga Juwita Inn in Bali, where half of the room was open to the sky, and one morning I woke to find a mother cat nursing kittens in the tropical greenery under the sink.

All in all, hotel bathrooms have come out of the closet in recent years, due in part to the fact that an increasing number of designers and consultants are women. High-end baths are getting bigger, with a place to sit, separate shower stalls and tubs, double sinks and room enough for two to do their ablutions. The European custom of placing the toilet in a small, separate chamber has crossed the Atlantic, though the United States persists in turning its back on bidets. As Janet Greer says, "Americans still aren't sure what to do with them."

Bathroom gadgetry has come a long way too, particularly when you consider that there were no proper bathrooms in Buckingham Palace as late as 1830. These days, hair dryers hardly seem worth comment next to appliances such as phones, TVs, CD players, radios and heated mirrors that don't steam up when you take a shower.

At the American Club, a Wisconsin resort owned by Kohler Co., the plumbing manufacturer, every tub has whirlpool jets, while some have "bath habitats" that can be programmed to emit cycles of sunshine, steam, misty rain and gentle breezes. The tubs at the Nob Hill Lambourne in San Francisco are extra deep, with dial-up temperature controls and faucets by your hip instead of at your feet — an admirable feature that lets you really stretch out. And for those who favor antique-looking fittings, isn't it a pleasure to find a single tap replacing separate ones for hot and cold water (which make it hard to wash up without scalding and freezing yourself by turns)?

"Her World"
by Susan Spano
Los Angeles Times

Comfy robes and plush towels are a plus, and though it's environmentally incorrect, few protest having housekeeping change them twice a day. And then there are all those wonderful free bathroom products in chic brand names, such as Hermes at Hotel Le Bristol in Paris, Floris at the New York Palace, Contemporel at The Clarence in Dublin, and Rainforest Essentials at Shutters in Santa Monica.

Best of all is the fact that hotel bathrooms are more aesthetically pleasing than they used to be — in fact, downright stylish. Greiman favors clear glass shower stalls that yield a "floaty" effect; Leo-Andrieu emphasizes precious materials such as African wenge wood; and Greer ties her bathrooms together visually with color-coordinated fabrics.

"Women in particular respond to sophistication," in the opinion of hotelier Ian Schrager, who, with the help of designer Philippe Starck, has transformed hotels such as the Mondrian in Los Angeles and the Delano in Miami into chic, minimalist meccas. At the newly refurbished Delano, this extends to the bathrooms, which have tubs molded out of seamless blocks of marble. I haven't seen them, but they sound rather like the first bathroom in recorded history, which dates to 1800 B.C. and was owned by King Minos of Crete. Modern amenities are nice, but I'd pay a bundle to take a bath there.

SHELBY LYMAN ON CHESS

Shelby Lyman brought chess to millions on National Television. The most widely read syndicated chess columnist in the world, his Weekly Chess Column appeals to the broadest audience possible – from young adults to savvy greybeards, from suburban to inner-city school children.

Basic Chess Features
P.O. Box 63,
South Gibson,
PA 18842
Phone
(212) 586-3700

Thanks to computers and the Internet and a cornucopia of scholastic chess programs, the ancient game has become a most popular and modern one. Shelby Lyman's features will be a must reading for anyone in your area with even a slight interest in the game.

CHESS QUIZ also available:
Daily mini-feature for use 1 to 7 times weekly

We Rank The BEST PLACES TO LIVE IN THE U.S.

ALL NEW 2000 EDITOR&PUBLISHER MARKET GUIDE.

Now Including the Exclusive E&P Better Living Index!

For 75 years marketers have used the E&P MARKET GUIDE as a planning tool. They have come to rely on the demographic and economic tables with actuals and remarkably accurate annual projections.

But the MARKET GUIDE has also been a highly recommended source of relocation data. Its unique combination of quantitative and qualitative data has provided an accurate description of community life.

Now, in our 76th anniversary printing, the MARKET GUIDE offers more new features to enhance its usefulness in both areas!

Relocation info now includes rankings of quality of life data including:
- Cost of Living Index
- Crime Index
- And overall BETTER LIVING INDEX!

Demographic data now includes:
- Graduation Levels
- Housing and Rental Rates

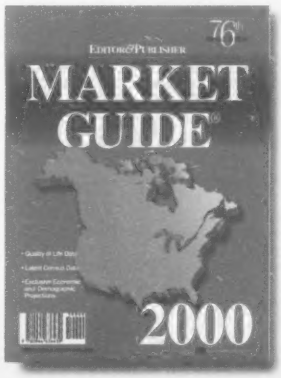
Now Population Forecasts are projected out 5 YEARS to 2005!

All the market data for Canada is in one convenient section!

PLUS ...
... these regular features: Population by Age, Ethnic Breakdowns, Number of Households, Income per Household and per Capita, Principal Industries, Chain Outlets, Retail Outlets, Location of Markets, Newspapers Serving the Market, Retail Sales Data, and much, much more!



It's the only source of valuable, descriptive information for MSA and non-MSA markets in the U.S. and Canada ... plus critical market data for more than 1,600 cities and all 3,141 U.S. counties.

PRICING
The print copy of the E&P MARKET GUIDE is just $140. It's also available on CD-ROM for windows. Pricing for the CD-ROM, which includes the printed Market Guide, is just $495. (CA, DC, FL, IL, MA, MD, NJ, NY, OH and TX residents please add appropriate sales tax. Canada residents please add GST.)

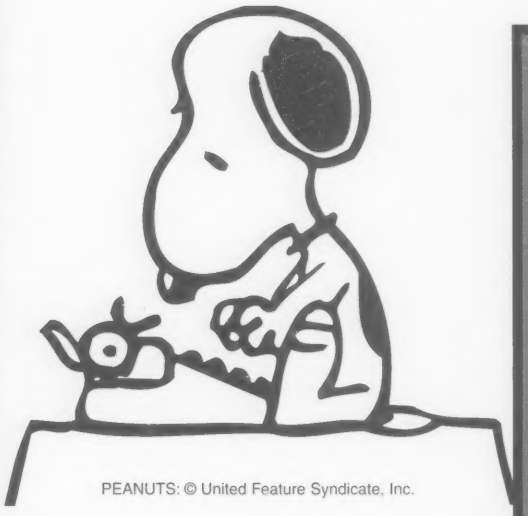
PEANUTS LIVES ON!

Thanks to thousands of newspapers.

Like a classic novel, a true masterpiece never goes out of style.

Nearly all 2,600 newspapers that published Peanuts before Charles Schulz retired continue to publish classic Peanuts today. Papers worldwide recognize the appeal of the best-loved comic strip in history. Generations of readers will enjoy re-living these unforgettable moments and sharing them with younger readers for the first time.



PEANUTS: © United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

"Let Charlie Brown and his gang live forever, entertaining generation after generation with a universal message, and let the memory of Charles (Sparky) Schulz live forever with them. We owe them and we owe him nothing less."

— Gregory Favre,
Vice President
